As this newsletter went to press, President Donald Trump was still pursuing legal challenges in several states to get an honest accounting of the votes and to ensure the integrity of our electoral process. However that mission turns out, one thing is undeniable: the left-wing media stole the election.

The leftist press employed several tactics to mislead the public and suppress the vote. They also censored — bias by omission — vital information about Joe Biden and his son Hunter Biden, which probably would have changed the outcome of this election, as our research and polling shows.

On top of that, as the MRC has documented, the social media giants Facebook and Twitter increasingly censored the Trump campaign both before and after the Nov. 3 election. In addition, the liberal media derided President Trump with nearly constant negative coverage, something they have done for four years straight.

The 2020 election reveals just how corrupt and powerful the left-wing media are and why the work of the MRC is so important to this nation. Without a free and honest press, the Republic cannot survive. Let’s look at some facts.

On Oct. 14, the New York Post broke an explosive story about the corrupt, multi-million-dollar business dealings of Joe Biden and Hunter Biden with nefarious groups in the Ukraine and Communist China. There were emails, photos, and videos on Hunter Biden’s laptop, obtained by The Post, which exposed several pay-for-play operations. The evidence indicated that Hunter was the bag man for his father. It also revealed Hunter’s extensive crack-cocaine use and self-made pornography, which is an invitation for blackmail against him and his father.

The story is more damaging than Watergate, so you would think there would be non-stop news coverage. Yet during the two weeks after the story broke there were 113 hours of network news coverage and only 21 minutes of it devoted to the Biden laptop story!

Also, on Oct. 27, one week before Election Day, former Biden-business partner Tony Bobulinski went on Tucker Carlson Tonight and corroborated much of the information that was stored on the laptop. (The Bidens have not denied that the laptop and data are real and belong to them.)

The Bobulinski interview was absolutely devastating. But now the Trump presidency is coming to an end, with so many squandered opportunities and ruined potential, but also an era of just plain meanness. It must be said, to paraphrase President Ford, for tens of millions of our fellow Americans, their long national nightmare is over. ... but CNN isn't biased.
It has been said, “the pen is mightier than the sword,” and observing the left-wing media’s assault on the truth, they indeed have weaponized their writing tools to skewer facts. “Truth in journalism” sadly is a motto from a bygone era, but MRC supporters Tom and Kipp Gutshall want to make the media great again. They do it by supporting conservative student-journalists in the MRC Internship Program.

It started in 2012, when the Gutshalls’ love of conservatism and a chance-spotting of MRC President Brent Bozell on TV drew them to the MRC. “We saw Brent’s face on TV, and never forgot,” Tom Gutshall mused.

The timing was right. The Gutshalls were impressed by the articulate manner in which Brent explained media bias and its effect on the election. It struck a chord. The media spun the news to help the liberal candidate. The Gutshalls were convinced the MRC could make a difference.

They have been major donors ever since.

We sat down with the Gutshalls to discuss their commitment to the next generation of conservatives through the MRC’s Internship Program. Tom first spoke enthusiastically about his upbringing and conservative roots: “Since I was five, I was taught about American history in school, what the Constitution represented, and why we have the Bill of Rights. Our family were close confidantes with members of Congress, including Rep. Richard Simpson (R-Penn.), and I learned a lot about how government worked, and how folks from different parties would work things out ‘over lunch.’”

While supporting the MRC, the Gutshalls had an epiphany of sorts and started earmarking a portion of their donations to the MRC Internship Program. “We are engaged in the public knowing the truth, because young people are not getting the word in school, not learning how a constitutional republic works,” Tom said. “It is our attempt to bring the truth out in the media to correct all of this. The impact of these young conservative journalists will last for years. Hopefully, they will bring us back to our senses about how limited government works.”

The MRC hosts spring, summer, and fall internships. The Gutshalls not only support the program, but they also sponsor an intern for each session. Last summer, the Gutshalls sponsored Bailey Duran, who interned for CNSNews.
Mark Levin shared her blogs, and more than 600,000 people viewed her articles.

“We were so impressed with her remarkable depth of understanding of the political system,” Tom enthused about meeting Bailey. “And her passion for getting it right! Oh, and I shared with her our family recipe for squirrel stew!” Tom said jokingly, referring to time he spent hunting in West Virginia. He concluded, “My passion will stay this way until we get back to balance. We need to get our nation back.”

All of us at the MRC appreciate the support of the Gutshalls. Their gifts are a blessing and truly paying dividends. This current semester features 13 interns, the MRC’s largest fall internship class to date. And the digital reach of our interns’ content is growing: one of our summer interns, Anna Gould, designed a patriotic 4th of July graphic shared on Twitter by none other than President Trump, who has 88 million followers.

What about the future of the MRC Internship Program and its mission to produce fair-minded journalists? Tom opined, “I like to think that at some time it won’t be necessary because the government has come back into balance. Sure, the push and shove will go on for a long time. But, by golly, we are going to win it.”
MSNBC contributor Jason Johnson lectures that Republicans are “the enemy,” and that, “There is nobody who Donald Trump likes. I don’t even think he likes his kids.”

MSNBC Fuels Hatred
On Nov. 4, MSNBC contributor Jason Johnson, a Robespierre-wanna-be, proclaimed he was “disturbed” by the 70 million Americans who voted for Donald Trump and demanded that Joe Biden treat Republicans as “the enemy.” On Deadline: White House, Johnson railed, “Trump may have a particular disdain for black people, he may have a particular disdain for children at the border but, remember, this is a guy who left his own supporters out in the middle of a tarmac and hopped on a plane. There is nobody who Donald Trump likes. I don’t even think he likes his kids.”

“The people chasing the Biden-Harris truck out of Texas, they are the enemies of democracy,” ranted Johnson. “The people right now attacking vote counters in Detroit, they are the enemy. Kyle Rittenhouse is the enemy. Mitch McConnell is the enemy.”

So much for the “unity” speeches.

Twitter’s Bias
Social media giant Twitter frequently censors (or suppresses) conservatives on its platform, especially tweets by President Trump. Given the political donations of Twitter (and Facebook) employees, such digital book burning should come as no surprise. As MRC Business reports, “Facebook employees and Twitter employees contributed over 90% of their election donations of $200 or more to Democrats” during the 2020 election cycle.

Also, records show that donations of $200 or more from Twitter employees (not counting Facebook) went 99.33% to Democrats ($574,601) and – wait for it – only 0.67 percent ($3,897) to Republicans. The top recipient, Democratic presidential nominee Joe Biden, received a lion’s share of $157,051, or a whopping 27% of Twitter employee donations.

No doubt, this explains why Twitter was so keen on censoring multiple Trump tweets after Nov. 3, as news of election fraud snowballed.

CNN’s Treactly Melodrama
When CNN’s Wolf Blitzer declared Joe Biden to be the “projected” president-elect on Nov. 7, contributor Van Jones, a long-time leftist, couldn’t contain himself. Misty and teary-eyed, Jones blubbered, “It’s easier to be a parent this morning, it’s easier to be a dad. It’s easier to tell your kids character matters. Tell them the truth matters. Being a good person matters.”

He prattled on, “This is a big deal for us just to be able to get some peace and have a chance for a reset, and the character of the country matters and being a good man matters. ... I’m sorry for the people who lost, for them it’s not a good day. But for a whole lot of people it’s a good day.”

For four-plus years, CNN and Van Jones viciously attacked Trump. They gave him no peace; they were not “good persons.”
Sour Brian

On MSNBC’s The 11th Hour, host Brian Williams — who lost his ABC News anchor gig for lying — could not hold back his contempt for President Trump’s nominations to the federal bench. One of the new judges confirmed to a lifetime slot is Kathryn Mizelle. “She’s only been out of law school for eight years,” fretted Williams. “The [left-wing] Bar Association labeled her unqualified for the job.... She clerked for Supreme Court Justice Clarence Thomas, and she works at Jones Day — one of the Trump campaign law firms where [Don] McGahn is a partner.”

“She’s deeply religious, talks about her faith,” and now at age 33 she’s “part of a federal judiciary remade by [Sen. Lindsey] Graham, [Mitch] McConnell, and Trump,” whined Williams. “The other four federal judges approved in these last 30 hours of Senate work, they are ages 38, 45, 39 and 40 — all appointed for life, all with the power to reshape American law and life for the next half century or more.”

The horror, the horror, the horror.

The ‘Leftist’ View

The female co-hosts of ABC’s The View, who have trashed Trump and his supporters for four years, went on the attack again post-election, deriding the fact that some 70 million Americans voted for the president. On the Nov. 5 show, Joy Behar griped, “It’s such a disheartening — this election was disheartening in many ways because we see that half the country ignores the terrible things that he’s done for whatever reason!”

Co-host Sunny Hostin railed, “This president has shown us that he is a misogynist, that he is homophobic, that he is racist, and that he mishandled a coronavirus pandemic to the tune of over 250,000 American deaths. Yet 50% of America saw all of that and looked the other way. ... [A]nd that I think is despicable. It is un-American.”

In other words, it’s “disheartening” for The View because Trump may have lost but clearly half the country supports his views, his policies, and his overall vision for the nation.

MSNBC Hysterics

In its drive to help defeat President Trump, MSNBC hacks tried to ramp-up fear of NATO disintegrating if Trump won a second term. Reporter Richard Engel fretted on Nov. 3, “America’s allies, where I am in the U.K., France, Germany, they’re watching with great concern. They worry that NATO, that this partnership which has been damaged over the last four years might not be able to survive four more years of President Trump.”

MSNBC’s Katy Tur reported that the Carter Center was unofficially monitoring the election. Engel then harped that the election monitors are watching “the voting that is taking place in the U.S. and they are very concerned.... The same kind of red flags that come up time and time again when strong men try to cling to power. And, as history has shown, oftentimes these tactics work and sometimes the strong men do cling to power.”

No doubt, if Trump were a left-wing “strong man,” MSNBC would canonize him.
CNN’s Preposterous Call for Unity

TIM GRAHAM — EXECUTIVE EDITOR, MRC NEWSBUSTERS

There was a Museum of Broadcasting in New York City, but there’s never been a Museum of Broadcasting Shamelessness. Imagine a place where they could run a medley of clips of Dan Rather insisting that, despite the small problem of his reporting on phony National Guard documents, “the underlying story is true.”

An obvious entry in the Shamelessness Museum emerged about one minute after Joe Biden made his “victory speech” on the night of Nov. 7. CNN tweeted out a new commercial in which it creepily echoed Biden’s sentiments that we must all come together and break out the Cokes and sing “I’d Like to Teach the World to Sing” or something.

A female narrator mourned in the commercial that “our trust has been broken — in our leaders, in our institutions, even with some of our friends. And we are hurting. Now, more than ever, we need each other — to listen, to learn from one another, to rebuild those bonds.”

Does anyone think CNN hasn’t been ripping apart our leaders and our institutions for four years? The announcer added: “Trust shows that we believe in the good in each other. It’s what makes us human. And when we trust one another, that is when we can truly achieve great things.”

If you thought this would lead to an abrupt switch in CNN’s daily product from hourly rage to “Mister Rogers’ Neighborhood,” you would be sadly, badly mistaken. Instead, shameless CNN is running this unity-goo-goo advertisement in between its usual Trump Hater thunderbolts.

Anderson Cooper is pictured in the ad, but two days after Biden declared victory, Cooper was furious that Trump hadn’t conceded. He complained to old Obama strategist David Axelrod: “In the mid-90s — I think it was like 96 — I was in Kinshasa, in the waning days of Mobutu. And Mobutu was, you know, a pretty awful dictator. And when he finally fled the country and the rebels were moving to take the capital, his son drove around in a pickup truck with a machine gun and settling scores with people he felt had not been supportive enough with Mobutu.”

So, President Donald Trump and Donald Trump Jr. are somehow comparable to a tyrant and his son on a mobile, murderous rampage. Cooper added: “Thankfully, it hasn’t come to that here, but I can’t believe we’re in a situation where, you know, a transfer of power is not — I can’t believe we are in this situation here. It just seems so petty.”

Anderson Cooper has cornered the market on pettiness. This came after he strangely apologized for comparing the president to “an obese turtle on his back flailing in the hot sun.” This showed his capacity for insincerity.

But this kind of inflammatory fare just keeps churning on CNN. Morning anchor John Berman carped on Nov. 9 that the Republicans were still enabling Trump: “They’re treating him like a petulant child....They hope he wears himself out.” The next day, Berman complained that the GOP wasn’t accepting Biden’s call for unity: “The response from the outgoing president? No. The response from Republican leaders in Congress? F no.”

CNN should expect hostility toward the call for unity, because hyperbolic abuse has come out of the network for years. There will be no unity, because there is not one ounce of regret from CNN.

You cannot spend four years with people such as Don Lemon denouncing Trump fans as “people who will lie, steal and cheat, lie to their own mother, lie to themselves” and expect unity. The response from the administration? Hell no. The response from Republican leaders in Congress? F no.”

You cannot spend four years with people such as Don Lemon denouncing Trump fans as “people who will lie, steal and cheat, lie to their own mother, lie to themselves” and expect unity. CNN’s own continued abuse in between the “unity” commercials should underline why their Xeroxed Biden message is preposterous.

On FNC’s Oct. 27, both Joe Concha, on Varney & Co, and Sean Hannity cited a NewsBusters study documenting how 92% of news stories about President Trump were negative, while 66% about Joe Biden were positive — a 158-point difference.
Democrats nationwide, asking if they knew about the Biden laptop story. A full 36% said they knew nothing about it. In addition, 13% of these voters (or 4.6% of Biden’s total vote), said they would not have voted for Biden, if they had been informed about the story.

Had they known, Joe Biden would not have carried Arizona, Georgia, Pennsylvania, or Wisconsin (as reported on Nov. 5). Instead, Donald Trump would have won 289 electoral votes and a second term.

That is what happens when the left-wing media and Big Tech censor the news. They can willfully mislead the public and take out a president. They can subvert the Constitution and cripple the Republic.

In addition to the bias by omission, the liberal news outlets and the polling firms that work with them deliberately under-poll Republican to make it look like Biden was way ahead of Trump. This is called suppressing the vote: if you see your candidate is way behind in the polls, you are less likely to go out and vote.

Up through Election Day most of the polls said Biden was winning. For instance, in the closing national polls Quinnipiac gave Biden 50% and Trump 39%, an 11% margin; NBC/Wall Street Journal said Biden 52% and Trump 42%; and CNN gave Biden 54% and Trump 42%, a 12% spread. The actual margin (on Nov. 5) was Biden 50.4% and Trump 48%. The national polls were wrong.

On Oct. 28, an ABC/Washington Post poll absurdly claimed that Biden was leading Trump by 17% in Wisconsin; the actual margin (on Nov. 5) was 0.7%. Such faulty polling was used in many states and it was willfully wrong.

Just like in 2016, day after day after day, the pollsters in 2020 said there was no way Trump could win. They did this on purpose. They knew exactly what they were doing. As with Hillary Clinton, they were firmly vested in Biden’s election.

Such rigged polling qualifies as election tampering or, at the very least, a violation of federal election laws. There needs to be a federal investigation. And Americans should never trust these hucksters again.

On top of the laptop story and polling shenanigans, the ABC, CBS, and NBC nightly newscasts delivered 92% negative coverage to Trump in the three months prior to the election. They gave Biden 66% positive coverage.

The attacks, smears, and outright lies have been relentless. Over the 33 years the MRC has been in operation, I have never seen anything like it.

The left-wing social media giants, Twitter in particular, also used their platforms to denigrate Trump and boost Biden. As the MRC has documented, since May 31, 2018, Twitter has censored Trump a grand total of 111 times. In contrast, Biden and his campaign have received no forms of censorship or repression.

If the media were even marginally fair and honest, the 2020 election would have turned out differently. Our polling and research prove this. But the leftist press is dishonest and destructive. They stole the election.

We work every day to document, expose, and neutralize their chicanery. You can help us in this good fight by making a donation to our nonprofit organization. Use the reply card and postage-paid envelope to make your most generous gift today. We look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,
