MRC in the News

Trump Victory Triggers Nonstop Liberal Media Hysteria

As we warned at the start of the campaign, the liberal media distorted, smeared, and relentlessly attacked the conservative in the 2016 presidential race and did everything they could to protect and promote the leftist nominee.

The media assault on Trump was unprecedented, like nothing I've seen in the 30-year history of the MRC. They were first disdainful, later sure they'd destroyed him. But as election night progressed, panic set in. You could see it in the liberal journalists' faces. Their world and their credibility were falling apart. Trump won, "bigly".

His historic victory triggered hysteria in the liberal media, a condition from which they have yet to recover. They can't control themselves; they rant of dictatorship, racism, a Fourth Reich. Their "reporting" is so over the top it's propagandistic, which reveals largely why a vast majority of Americans no longer trust the media.

In shock over Trump, the liberal media can't cope and they can't admit their political myopia caused them to get so much wrong in the 2016 race. They were so in the tank for Clinton they now don't know what to do, except double down on their biases and keep attacking Trump.

The MRC has documented, exposed, and neutralized this liberal media bias through its divisions — News Analysis, NewsBusters, MRC Business, MRC Culture, CNSNews.com, MRCTV — and in numerous radio and TV interviews of its experts. Let's look at a few examples of the leftist press' meltdown.

A few hours after Trump won, NBC's

Richard Engel remarked that "there were gasps around the world" and headlines such as "Trumpocalypse" and "Disunited States." He further fretted "there are deeper concerns tonight that the world's shining light of democracy has gone dark."

Tom Friedman at the NYTs blared, "This is a moral 9/11, only 9/11 was done to us from the outside and we did this to ourselves." MSNBC's Lawrence O'Donnell lectured that American civilization was on the rise for 240 years but with Trump, "we turned down. That's what you're feeling. That's what the decline of civilization feels like."

City University journalism Prof. Jeff Jarvis moaned, "I fear that journalism is irredeemably broken, a failure. My

Donald Trump's historic victory triggered hysteria in the liberal media who were so in the tank for Hillary Clinton they didn't know how to get out. Now they're doubling down on their bias, smearing Trump and his Cabinet as racist, fascist, the "apocalypse," and a "national emergency."

profession failed to inform the public about the fascist they are electing.”

Slate's Jamelle Bouie complained that Trump won “a campaign of racism and bigotry,” a “push-back against the advancement of African-Americans, of Hispanics, of women, of Muslim Americans.”

Late Night's Stephen Colbert was anxiety-ridden, asking how “to avoid the apocalypse,” while The Daily Show's Trevor Noah confessed he was “officially s---ing my pants.” HBO’s John Oliver, who had mocked Trump for a year, screamed, “How the f--- did we get here and what the f---do we do now?” They were hysterical.

“For 240 years, American government and American civilization has been steadily moving up, slowly but surely improving, rising higher and higher and higher and then last night, we turned down. That’s what you’re feeling. That’s what the decline of a civilization feels like. The question tonight is how long will we decline,”

Disgraced journalist Dan Rather was melodramatic: “History will demand to know which side were you on” because the “very fundamentals of our beautiful experiment in a pluralistic democracy” are in jeopardy.

“I feel the rip tide of regression once again swelling under my feet,” he bemoaned. “But I intend to remain standing.”

CNN’s Brian Stelter, a flaming liberal who constantly tells his tiny audience there are no liberal media, asked if Trump winning the Electoral College but losing the popular vote constituted a “national emergency.” Stelter referred to “national emergency” again when smearing Trump adviser Steve Bannon as a “white supremacist” and “anti-Semite.”

Politico's Julia Ioffe – who has since been fired for tweeting that Trump was f---ing his daughter Ivanka – told Stelter that America is “on the verge of something potentially awful” because Trump is the “chaos-sower in chief.”

CNN’s Christine Amanpour warned, “journalism and democracy are in mortal peril.” She also trashed Trumpsters as people “angry enough to ignore the wholesale vulgarity of language, the sexual predatory behavior, the deep misogyny, the bigoted and insulting views.” (Amanpour never reports on Bill Clinton’s “deep misogyny” and sexually predatory behavior.)

Like many of her colleagues, Amanpour blamed “fake news,” in part, for Trump’s win. He “did a savvy end run around us and used it [social media] to go straight to the people,” she whined, and this was combined with the “tsunami of fake news sites – a.k.a. lies – that somehow people could not, would not, recognize, fact check or disregard.”

President Obama and Hillary Clinton also blamed “fake news,” as did CNN’s Stelter. “The evidence indicates this is more of a problem on the right, among some, not all, but some Trump supporters,” he pronounced (citing no facts). “But I would suggest to you that it starts at the top. After all, Trump himself frequently misled voters during his campaign.”

Stelter then hit his panic button: “Are we moving more into an authoritarian media climate, more like Russia or China?”

When it comes to “fake news,” incidentally, the liberal media never mention their “coverage” of a YouTube video causing Benghazi, “work place violence” at Ft. Hood, “hands up, don’t shoot” in Ferguson, NBC’s Brian Williams, “accept the election,” and “you can keep your doctor,” among many other “news stories.”

The latest “fake news” from the New York Times, L.A. Times, and Washington Post is that Trump wants to build internment camps for U.S. Muslims like FDR did for Japanese Americans during WWII.

Post-election, Rush Limbaugh said, “Trump won in part because of the media’s hysterical deceit, their hysterical partisanship, their hysterical abandonment of what they claim are their own definitions of their job. The media is a front group for Democrats like environmentalists are a front group for radical leftists.”

That’s true, and the hysterical deceit and partisanship is only going to get worse in 2017. The MRC, America’s Media Watchdog, will be documenting, exposing, and neutralizing that bias 24/7.

It is a brutal and never-ending battle against the liberal media, which you can help us to fight by making a donation to the MRC today. Join the cause! Call us today (571-267-3500). We look forward to speaking with you. Thank you.

Liberal Media Forever Praise Communist Thug Fidel Castro

After Cuba's Communist dictator Fidel Castro died in November at age 90, the liberal media gushed with favorable tributes and retrospectives. This was no surprise, as the left-wing media have been praising Castro since he seized power through the barrel of a gun in 1959.

Under Castro, Cuba became an island prison. An estimated 73,000 Cubans were killed or died as a result of Castro's Marxist policies, tens of thousands were cycled through Cuba's jails and mental wards, and in 1962-63 the Soviets placed nuclear missiles on the island – 90 miles from Florida – and Castro urged a first strike against America.

Despite all this, the liberal media relentlessly glossed over the barbarity of Communist life in Cuba, regularly praising Cuba's health care and education. Here are some of the more outlandish quotes about Communist Cuba by the liberal media over the years, which we've collected.

- “Everybody here seems agreed that Dr. Castro is one of the most extraordinary figures ever to appear on the Latin-American scene. He is by any standards a man of destiny.” – NYT's Herbert L. Matthews, 1/18/59
- “There is, in Cuba, government intrusion into everyone's life, from the moment he is born until the day he dies. The reasoning is that the government wants to better the lives of its citizens and keep them from exploiting or hurting one another....On a sunny day in a park in the old city of Havana it is difficult to see anything that is sinister.” – NBC's Ed Rabel, 2/88
- “Medical care was once for the privileged few. Today it is available to every Cuban and it is free. Some of Cuba's health care is world class. In heart disease, for example, in brain surgery. Health and education are the revolution's great success stories.” – ABC's Peter Jennings, 4/3/89
- In November 1993, CBS This Morning reporter Giselle Fernandez spent three days in Cuba, which she labeled “Fidel Castro's playground.” In three days of live reports, Fernandez devoted exactly one sentence to Castro's human rights abuses.
- “To be a poor child in Cuba may in many instances be better than being a poor child in Miami and I'm not going to condemn their lifestyle so gratuitously.” – Newsweek's Eleanor Clift, 4/8/2000
- “For Castro, freedom starts with education. And if literacy alone were the yardstick, Cuba would rank as one of the freest nations on Earth.” – ABC's Barbara Walters, 10/2002
- “Some Cubans enjoy comforts of communism.” – AP's Vanessa Arrington, 8/4/06
- “Even Castro's critics praised his advances in health care and in education.... Fidel Castro was considered, even to this day, the George Washington of his country among those who remain in Cuba.” – ABC's Jim Avila, 11/26/16
- “It's still one of those nations where you see donkey carts alongside cars, trucks and buses in downtown Havana, because that's exactly what they'd rather have for transportation.” – MSNBC's Brian Williams, 11/26/16
- “It's very easy to have a simplistic view, that he was all awful for Cuba and the world, and I just don't think that's accurate. I think that the Cubans have a tremendous sense of pride over his legacy, and I think that he will be remembered fondly.” – FNC's Geraldo Rivera, 11/26/16

Bits & Pieces

Trump F#@ $ Ivanka

The leftist media despise President-elect Donald Trump so much they think it's okay to say the president-elect is "is f---ing his daughter." Yes, Politico's Julia Ioffe tweeted that on Dec. 14 after reports that Ivanka Trump would have an office in the West Wing. "Either Trump is f---ing his daughter or he's shirking nepotism laws. Which is worse?" tweeted Ioffe.

As her perverted tweet went viral, Ioffe tried to back down, tweeting anew, "I do regret my phrasing and apologize for it. It was a crass joke that I genuinely regret." She tried again, "It was a tasteless, offensive tweet that I regret and have deleted. I am truly and deeply sorry. It won't happen again." Too late. Politico, to its credit, fired Ioffe that day.

But what makes a leftist "reporter" think they can write such filth? Imagine if Rush Limbaugh tweeted that Barack Obama was f---ing his daughter Malia.

Given rumors that Ivanka Trump might get an office in the White House, Politico's Julia Ioffe actually asked in a tweet whether Donald Trump was f---ing his own daughter. Ioffe was fired shortly thereafter, and The Atlantic announced it was hiring her as a national security reporter.

Charles 'Alexander Hamilton' Pierce

Still enraged over Donald Trump's win in a fair and democratic election, Esquire's flaming leftist Charles Pierce called upon the Electoral College electors to bone up on Alexander Hamilton and vote against Trump to save the nation. "The situation is the most stark challenge to a free people that has arisen in my lifetime," Pierce fumed on Dec. 10. "We are a month away from inaugurating a manifestly unqualified and ethically unfit man as president of the United States ... and who now may very well be the willing bobo for a foreign dictator."

If enough electors say no to Trump, "as a strong and functional constitutional republic, we would withstand the lycanthropic yowling of the lunatic supporters of the president-elect," yapped Pierce. "The decision would then go to Congress."

In a parting volley, Pierce railed, "If we're going to have a constitutional crisis, damnit, we should have one according to the Constitution."

So much for accepting the will of the people.

Esquire's left-wing scribbler Charles Pierce pleaded with the Electoral College to vote against President-elect Trump and ignore the "lycanthropic yowling of [his] lunatic supporters."

ESPN: Crime Analysis

Although there is no evidence about who broke into the home of N.Y. Giants' fullback Nikita Whitlock and drew swastikas and wrote "Trump" on the walls, ESPN's Max Kellerman thought it was perfectly fine to blame the president-elect for the crime.

On ESPN2's First Take, Kellerman railed, "The fact of the matter is that Donald Trump was endorsed by the Ku Klux Klan.... And there was an appeal to white nationalists.... This is not the first time that something like this has happened since the election and some reference to Trump was made."

Trump needs to publicly address these crimes "every time" they happen, Kellerman lectured. Co-host Stephen Smith then declared that Trump must be "more active" in condemning racism. Over at CBS Sports, Jared Dubin whined that the Whitlock crime "is part of a rising trend of hate crimes that have taken place since the Nov. 8 presidential election."

Citing no evidence, ESPN's Max Kellerman strongly suggested that Donald Trump was at fault for the break-in at a football player's house.

'No Abortions!'

ABC's George Stephanopoulos regularly spews liberal talking points on television, a practice he also apparently repeats at home given his 14-year-old daughter's outburst over Trump's election victory. As Stephanopoulos's wife Ali Wentworth explained on ABC's The View, "I'll tell you a story I wasn't planning on telling, which might be the end of my marriage. But we were watching the election – it just involves my 14-year-old getting upset about the election and screaming, 'No abortions!' really loudly.

"I was like, 'You haven't kissed a boy yet so don't use that word so flippantly,' but she meant women's rights."

We wonder where she got these ideas.

The wife of ABC's George Stephanopoulos brags that their daughter threw a pro-abortion hissy fit after Trump's electoral victory.

Media Yawn at Church Bombing

A radical Muslim terrorist exploded a suicide bomb on Sunday, Dec. 11 inside Cairo's St. Peter and Paul's Church, which killed 25 people and wounded 49, but the morning news shows on NBC and CNN didn't mention it and CBS's Sunday Morning gave it one sentence of coverage. ABC's Good Morning America mentioned it in passing on Dec. 11 but did no follow-up reporting on Dec. 12.

Instead, on that Monday, Dec. 12, NBC's Today devoted 4 minutes to author Sara Gruen and her large quantity purchase of a popular children's toy. Also, Good Morning America set aside nearly a minute to cover President Barack Obama and actor Bill Murray putting golf balls in the Oval Office. And they complain about "fake news"?

Minibits

■ CNN's very small Brian Stelter whines, again, about Donald Trump criticizing the press, "This is exactly what authoritarians do. This is what strongmen do. This is what happens in authoritarian regimes." ■ NBC's Morgan Radford laments the death of Communist thug Fidel Castro, "Tears of sorrow and cries of patriotism. Thousands lined the streets to greet the caravan of Fidel Castro's ashes. A final farewell to a leader with a complicated legacy." ■ Apparently sober, Rolling Stone's Jesse Berney, citing the popular vote, declares, "The majority [of voters] rejected a near-sociopathic celebration of ignorance and the least qualified person ever to become a major party's nominee for president."

■ MSNBC's Chris Matthews stutters post-election, "People are scared. I'm still having a hard time getting myself used to standing on this Earth right now. This is a different Earth today than it was 24 hours ago. It's different place. It just is different." ■ CBS's Lesley Stahl, nearly crying, frets, "A lot of people are afraid. They're really afraid. African Americans think there's a target on their back. Muslims are terrified." ■ "Donald Trump will take his place now among the racists who have lived in the White House," claims socialist and MSNBC host Lawrence O'Donnell. ■ Predictably, singer/songwriter Fiona Apple performed a revised version of "Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire," singing instead, "Trump's nuts roasting on an open fire."

Whitewashing the Black President's Legacy

As Barack Obama's White House days run out, it's time for Obama's obsequious courtiers in the liberal media to announce his glorious "legacy." On December 7, CNN devoted a two-hour prime special to the Obama legacy, hosted by Fareed Zakaria, a journalist Obama had invited to the White House so the president could soak in his wisdom and expertise — in other words, so he could flatter a journalist into giving him softball coverage.

Mission accomplished.

Just as it began nine years ago, Zakaria started by celebrating the president's race, the gauzy references to Kenya and Kansas fusing into one glorious body. Forget what he did. The first legacy was simply who he represented.

And for that, he'd been victimized. In CNN's eyes, Obama's central crisis was the "fierce, unrelenting opposition" of Republicans and their latent racism. Obama adviser David Axelrod claimed "It's indisputable that there was a ferocity to the opposition and a lack of respect to him that was a function of race." CNN pundit Van Jones agreed: "I can't name one thing that this Congress supported this president on in eight years!" The Left never had the intellectual nuance (or the political decency) to acknowledge one could oppose Obama because he's a socialist — period.

At show's end, Zakaria concluded that "presidential legacies also exist above and beyond laws and policies. We remember John F. Kennedy for energy, vitality, elegance and intelligence that he brought to the White House. And in that sense Obama has left an indelible mark. He and his family occupied the White House with dignity, grace, and good humor. He ran an administration that was largely scandal-free and did it all the while under a microscope. Because he looked different."

At a time that the liberals are warning about the democracy-gutting potential of "fake news," there is no faker news than the declaration that Obama's time in office was "largely scandal-free." The two-hour special had no mention of Benghazi or IRS harassment, and no time for Solyndra or Fast & Furious. Some scandals — the failure of Obamacare, the courting of Islamist Iran — were cast as "signature achievements."

How this network still includes the word "news" in the title is beyond us.

Most spectacularly, Zakaria didn't utter one word about the national debt. It almost doubled from $10 trillion to an inconceivable $19 trillion in just eight years. Obama fans complain that it's not all Obama's fault, but CNN and Zakaria didn't think that's a "legacy," or at least as much a legacy as...Obama holding a "beer summit" for Harvard professor Henry Louis Gates.

The dourest note that Zakaria hit in the two hours was — you guessed it — that troublesome Donald Trump. He may erase much of what Obama thinks is his enormous legacy. Zakaria admitted Obamacare has "problems," but so what? Zakaria is so pro-Obama it doesn't matter if it's actually a complete failure. "I would argue that even if Trump finds a way to repeal and replace it, it remains a historic achievement. Obama did what seven presidents failed to do. He made health care a fundamental right. It is the signature achievement of a consequential president."

This is socialist logic. Enshrining a "right to health care" never guarantees comprehensive health care. Ask the people of Castro's Cuba. Hillary Clinton lost in part because working-class people couldn't afford — and didn't want — Obamacare. That is his legacy, too.

Conservatives will define Trump's success by measuring how many of Obama's failed policies are reversed, and whether untrammelled federal government overreach is slowed in any way. We can count on CNN to oppose that agenda every step of the way.

On FNC's Your World w/ Neil Cavuto, Brent Bozell said liberal reporters would have fainted in awe if Obama had saved the Carrier jobs in Indiana that Trump saved.

On Fox's Special Report, Brent Bozell blasted the liberal media for claiming their motives are anything but well-intentioned.

On Varney & Co., Brent Bozell criticized The Washington Post's naked partisanship, denouncing the paper as "militantly anti-Trump."

On Fox's After the Bell, NewsBusters Editor Tim Graham exposes the liberal media hypocrisy for criticizing Donald Trump's attacks on the leftist media but applauding President Obama's attacks on conservative media outlets such as the Rush Limbaugh Show and Fox News.

On Fox's Intelligence Report, Brent Bozell details how the liberal media are using the label "fake news" to target conservative organizations and get them censored on social media sites.
