Liberal Media Collude to Censor the News About IRS-Tea Party Scandal

The liberal media in America are completely in the tank for President Obama and his socialist agenda. This is evident on so many levels, as we document, expose, and neutralize daily here at the Media Research Center, and as I and my colleague Tim Graham examine in our new book, Collusion: How the Media Stole the 2012 Election and How to Stop Them From Doing it in 2016.

How the Media Stole the 2012 Election and How to Stop Them From Doing it in 2016.

One way the leftist media cover for the administration is to not report certain facts about a story — this is called bias by omission. They don't tell you the full story, sort of like Walter Cronkite in reverse: "And that's the way it isn't."

The Benghazi terrorist attack, which the media repeatedly said was caused by an anti-Muslim video (going into the 2012 election), occurred on Sept. 11. Four Americans were killed, including our ambassador. To this day, the murderous thugs have not been brought to justice and the 35 U.S. personnel on the ground — State Department and CIA — have not testified before Congress. The liberal media could care less.

Scattered reports about gun-running out of Benghazi to Syrian rebels and renditioning of Libyan jihadists at the CIA annex there are not touched by the networks. They're also silent about what Obama did that night after being told of the attack — did he just go to bed? And who told Hillary Clinton — before the fighting was over! -- that it was sparked by a YouTube video?

The liberal media aren't asking those questions, or any questions for that matter. They want Benghazi to go away. The same is true for the IRS-Tea Party scandal, which is worse than Richard Nixon using the IRS to punish his powerful political enemies. It is an unprecedented abuse of IRS power by liberals to persecute and harass ordinary American citizens and prevent them from fully participating in the political process.

As I said in a statement, joined by Rush Limbaugh, "The liberal media's refusal to cover the IRS scandal — more than the NSA scandal, more even than the tragic loss of life in Benghazi -- cuts to the very heart of their corruption. No fair, objective journalist can look at the facts of this flagrant abuse of power and not conclude that it is a massive political scandal deserving of constant, merciless scrutiny."

The liberal media want the IRS-Tea Party scandal, like the Benghazi fiasco, to go away, knowing that it was an abuse of power far worse than Richard Nixon using the IRS to punish his political enemies.

When the IRS scandal broke, the networks gave it decent coverage, which we noted. But that quickly tapered off to where now, despite blockbuster revelations leading to the White House, the coverage by the liberal media is nearly nonexistent. Let's look at some examples.

CBS Evening News ran one story - one! - about IRS-Tea Party revelations that lead to the White House, contrary to what the Obama administration claimed. ABC and NBC didn't run any stories on the new facts.

During a speech in mid-May, just prior to the release of an inspector general report about the IRS's targeting of "Tea Party" groups to delay their applications for tax-exemption status, a planted questioner asked IRS official Lois Lerner about the topic. Lerner claimed that several rogue agents in the IRS Cincinnati office had acted improperly.

Later, before Congress, Lerner repeated the Cincinnati narrative, said she and the Washington IRS office did nothing wrong, and then pleaded the 5th Amendment against self-incrimination.

Congress kept digging and, lo and behold, on July 18 career IRS employee Carter Hull, who works in the Washington IRS office, testified that as early as April 2010 he was given Tea Party applications to review and told to craft a template for screening such applications.

Hull also said he was ordered to send his "test case" Tea Party files to Lois Lerner's senior adviser - the first time he had been so instructed in his 48-year career. Hull further testified that Lerner's adviser said such applications had to go through the IRS chief counsel's office, which is headed by William Wilkins, one of only two Obama political appointees at the IRS.

So the story about the rogue Cincinnati agents, like the Benghazi video, was a lie.

On Aug. 4, 2011, Hull attended a meeting with people from Wilkins' office to discuss Tea Party applications. Five days later, Wilkins visited the White House.

So, the actual storyline shows that Tea Party applications were not just stalled in Cincinnati - they were reviewed in Washington, D.C. and overseen by Lerner's adviser and by the office of an Obama political appointee.

More than 50 days since Hull testified, neither ABC nor NBC have done a story. The CBS Evening News ran one story - one!

Some other facts, as documented and exposed by the MRC but not covered by ABC, CBS, or NBC, include the following:

- Tea Party applications are still being screened and delayed by the IRS, as are pro-life groups' applications.
- Government officials improperly accessed former GOP-Senate candidate Christine O'Donnell's tax files; the computer records of that activity were destroyed; and the DOJ isn't prosecuting anyone.
- $500 million in IRS contracts were awarded to a close friend of a senior IRS official.
- Despite the sequester and scandal, $70 million in bonuses are being distributed to IRS employees.
- IRS agents used credit cards to buy diet pills, romance novels, and online pornography.

- IRS documents about Tea Party files were so redacted, "blacked out," they were useless to congressional investigators.
- 100% of "progressive" tax-exemption applications were approved but only 46% of applications from conservatives.

ABC, NBC, CBS have reported nothing on these stories. They are deliberately censoring the news. There is no other way to explain the lack of coverage.

They did, however, give 187 minutes of coverage to the birth of the royal baby over three days. But during the 11-plus weeks since the IRS scandal broke, the networks provided only 157 minutes of coverage.

Obama and his squawking parrots in the liberal media are calling the IRS scandal a "phony scandal," and the networks have scrubbed it from their broadcasts. But the everyday Americans targeted by this historic abuse of power don't think it's phony.

Neither do we. Delaying tax-exemption applications for Tea Party groups since 2009-10 means using federal power to stop conservatives from participating fully in the political process during two important election cycles. That's tyrannical, and the liberal media are colluding to keep citizens in the dark.

We're America's media watchdog and we're holding them accountable. You can help us in this fight. Join us, and send a donation to the MRC today by calling 571-267-3500. Thank you.

Conservatives Won't Win Until They Fight the Culture Media & Hollywood Head-On

BY BRENT BOZELL AND TIM GRAHAM

Excerpted from the new book Collusion: How the Media Stole the 2012 Election and How to Stop Them From Doing it in 2016, by Brent Bozell and Tim Graham. Visit www.mediacollusion.com to purchase the book. All proceeds go to the MRC.

Conservatives must become far more educated about the news industry, selective in their choices, and confrontational when attacked. And they must learn to park their publicity-seeking egos in the garage.

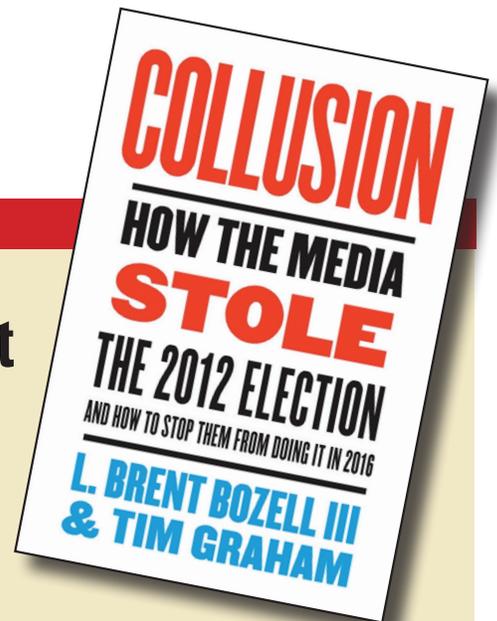

The research is there for anyone to recognize who will and won't be fair, and how he should be treated. Piers Morgan is not going to conduct a civilized interview and with his miniscule audience is irrelevant. So why consent to be interviewed and give him oxygen? The New York Times is going to edit mercilessly in order to present you in the worst possible light. Why expect otherwise?

Conservatives are ammo for Bill Maher, Jon Stewart, and Stephen Colbert. Why agree to be made a fool? There is nothing, absolutely nothing of value on MSNBC for a conservative. Why on earth does anyone accept any invitation for any show for any reason?

There is a world of difference between the taped and live interview. The former lends itself to shenanigans; with the latter, it's more difficult. Conservatives should always insist on a live format, if at all possible, and if in the process the interviewer pulls a fast one, with either incorrect statements, or some other exercise in Gotcha Journalism designed to embarrass the guest, the guest should pounce, and hit right back. It's national television, it's live, and they can't stop you.

Embarrass them this way, and Brian Williams & Co. will never try that again. If it's taped and later manipulated, the conservative should publicly denounce the network or print outlet, fully discredit the entity, and refuse ever to participate again unless a clarification, correction, or apology — whatever the offense called for — is issued.

Conservatives should understand there are outlets that aren't biased against them and generate major audiences, even larger ones than most liberal entities. Through conservative talk radio they can reach tens of millions—daily. There is Fox, and The Wall Street Journal and other sources that may not be conservative, but aren't activist liberal, either. And then there's the mother lode: the Internet.

Conservatives must understand that in the information age the cultural trumps the political. It is a lesson learned by the left years ago, and one they've perfected, projecting their vision to tens of millions of people daily, nightly, using entertainment television, movies, music, digital media — all the media formats where celebrities they've recruited, not politicians, champions the cause du jour. They are our society's royalty. They are the Pied Pipers and their legions of adoring fans will follow blindly, but obediently. When the culture is changed, the political battle is a mop-up operation, simply codifying the new cultural norm into law. They've succeeded with gay rights, made critical advances with environmental issues, regimented momentum for abortion, created a new national outcry for immigration "reform," and now are using it to go for the political Holy Grail, gun control.

Bits & Pieces

President Barack Obama ignorantly claims that Russian President Vladimir Putin had “headed up the KGB,” a ludicrous gaffe the networks did not correct or comment upon.

What Gaffes?

Although President Obama made several absurdly false statements during his appearance on The Tonight Show w/ Jay Leno, the networks covered for him and didn’t correct the record. On the Aug. 7 show, Obama claimed that Russian President Vladimir Putin had “headed up the KGB” in earlier days. Putin was a lieutenant colonel in the KGB but he was never head of the spy agency. Nonetheless, ABC’s World News and NBC’s Nightly News re-ran Obama’s remarks with no correction, leaving the impression that Obama had not erred.

Also on The Tonight Show, Obama said government needed to help fund the deepening of “ports all along the Gulf,” mentioning Charleston, S.C., Savannah, Ga., and Jacksonville, Fla., none of which are in the Gulf. They’re along the eastern seaboard. Neither ABC, CBS, nor NBC have corrected Obama’s glaring error. Do you think they’d be as kind to a Republican or to George W. Bush?

Hannity Killed Detroit

Detroit is bankrupt and broken because of Sean Hannity and other conservatives who felt threatened by Smokey Robinson, claims Salon’s Andrew O’Hehir. In a July 27 screed, “Why the Right Hates Detroit,” O’Hehir rails that Detroit and New Orleans, “as centers of African-American cultural and political power ... posed a psychic threat to the most reactionary and racist strains in American life,” a strain represented by the “coded racism of Sean Hannity.”

“As payback for the worldwide revolution symbolized by hot jazz, Smokey Robinson dancin’ to keep from cryin’ and Eminem trading verses with Rihanna, New Orleans and Detroit had to be punished,” Salon thumps. “Specifically, they had to be isolated, impoverished and almost literally destroyed, so they could be held up as examples of what happens when black people are allowed to govern themselves.” Conservatives killed Detroit to punish black people — that’s the intellectual height of leftist news analysis in 2013.

Salon.com actually published an article claiming that Detroit went bankrupt because of the “coded racism of Sean Hannity.”

Loaded Teachers

Nearly hysterical that some school districts are arming teachers to defend against potential mass shootings, NBC Today wondered how a pistol-packing faculty might affect students. On the Aug. 1 show, host Carson Daly teed up NJ American Federation of Teachers President Donna Chiera about the impact and she seriously said, “I would hate for students to say, ‘Oh, my goodness, if I answer the wrong question, is my teacher going to shoot me? If I make my teacher angry, is my teacher going to shoot me?’”

Daly didn’t challenge that absurd comment and Chiera rambled on, “I also think it impacts parents. And I wouldn’t want parents to come in and be hesitant to say something to me with, ‘Is this the teacher who’s packing the gun and what, do I have to be fearful?’ I think it would make an environment of fear.” How about an environment of idiocy at NBC?

GOP Apartheid

Republican efforts to require voters to present an ID before voting is like apartheid in South Africa, frets MSNBC's Chris Matthews.

On his July 29 Hardball show, Matthews told civil rights leader Wade Henderson, "It does look like it's almost like South Africa to this extent: You have a white- what's the word – feeble minority. It's losing its majority status. And it says, the Republican Party, 'we can only get so many white votes. So, we got to reduce the votes of others.' It does look that way. Only the-maybe you're non-partisan, but only Republicans have pushed this in these 31 states. No Democratic legislature. You gotta' look at the pattern here. You talk about profiling. I'm sorry, Republicans do this stuff."

MSNBC's Chris Matthews rants that GOP support for voter ID laws is similar to white rule in Apartheid South Africa.

To his credit, Henderson did not agree with Matthews' apartheid picture, only noting that, yes, 31 states are looking at the voter ID issue.

Sex Slave Military

MSNBC's Melissa Harris-Perry actually equated criminal Ariel Castro's house-prison/sex dungeon to America's colleges and the U.S. military – no kidding. Perry opined, "The twisted house that Castro built was designed to protect himself and keep his victims silent and hidden. And in some American institutions that were designed to promote intellectual and political freedoms, we find instead that this same culture of institutional self-preservation at the expense of survivors of sexual violence on college campuses, where victims' concerns go unaddressed and perpetrators go unpunished."

MSNBC's Melissa Harris-Perry equates life for women in the military and at college with the sex slave/torture dungeon run by perverted criminal Ariel Castro in his Cleveland home.

She dribbled on, "And in the U.S. military where an epidemic of sexual assault is met with an unwillingness to protect soldiers who have been victimized and a reluctance to prosecute their cases No one is suggesting that four-star generals are Ariel Castro, but that notion of, like, build the house to protect the perpetrator and not the victims just felt very familiar, felt resonant in this story."

Minibits

■ MSNBC's Chris Matthews fumes over GOP opponents of Obamacare: "Let me finish with the political terrorists of the right. I'm going to talk about them. Their names are Cruz, Paul and Lee." ■ CBS's Dean Reynolds ignorantly wonders of Pope Francis, "Do you think he's breaking with the Vatican?" ■ MSNBC's Krystal Ball riffs against Rush, "He is offensive in every way you can be offensive. He is racism in the big sense in terms of whole classes of people." ■ ABC's Barbara Walters defends prostitution: "I don't know how to put it. I said that's sort of in the realm of normalcy." ■ CBS's Diane Sawyer cheers the Supreme Court ruling in favor of gay marriage, "Good evening on this historic night, a night when America has a new definition of what it means to be married." ■ MSNBC's Ed Schultz rants, "The only thing that satisfies the conservative movement in this country is when they can keep a liberal down, when they can keep a worker down, when they can keep a minority down." ■ HBO's Bill Maher lectures on CNN's Stroumbouloupoulos, "The people who watch Fox News live in a bubble I can't even describe to you. They have – the facts never get in. It's like the airlock in an alien movie, you know, that you can't let the alien in or else you have to blow up the ship." ■ Hollywood's Oliver Stone being, well, Oliver Stone: "There seem to be madmen running the country. Mad men. They wear suits, they wear ties, they talk nice like Obama or tough like Bush, but what's the difference? They're mad men."

Oliver Stone rants that "madmen" run America - "They wear suits, they wear ties, they talk nice like Obama or tough like Bush, but what's the difference? They're mad men."

TAX ALERT

TAX-SAVING LEGISLATION SET TO EXPIRE

Take advantage of it now and help the MRC

As part of the American Taxpayer Relief Act of 2012, individuals age 70 1/2 or older may transfer any amount up to $100,000 from an individual retirement account (IRA) to any qualified charitable organization, including the Media Research Center. Although you would not receive an income tax deduction for this gift, the distribution would not be considered taxable income to you - a complete “wash” for tax purposes. Additionally, this disbursement would fulfill some or all of your 2013 required minimum distribution without increasing your taxable income.

If you are looking for a way to make additional cash contributions above your current 50 percent of adjusted gross income (AGI) limit, if you don't itemize your deductions, or if you are concerned that an increased AGI will cause more of your Social Security income to be taxed, a tax-free IRA rollover might be right for you.

Act now - this provision expires on December 31, 2013.

For more information and a sample letter for your IRA custodian, please call Michael Sanzi, MRC's Director of Development, at (800) 672-1423 or direct (571) 267-3443. Or, visit our planned giving website at www.legacy.vg/mrc.

An Essential Book Recommendation: Brent Bozell's "Collusion: How the Media Stole the 2012 Election -- and How to Stop Them from Doing It in 2016"
July 15, 2013

RUSH: This is a book that you need... This is the kind of book that you give to a liberal, and you can cajole them into reading it. This is the kind of book you give to people who need to understand how they are being lied to, how they are being misinformed by an institution that they might trust.

On Rush Limbaugh's July 15th radio show he recommended that his listeners give 'Collusion' to a liberal to read and learn how the media manipulate the public to create "mass assumptions."

"This is the kind of book that you give to a liberal and you cajole them into reading it. This is the kind of book you give to people who need to understand how they are being lied to; how they are being misinformed by an institution that they might trust," he said.

"This book contains what the Media Research Center does that nobody else does. And that is document, sound byte by sound byte, story by story, clip by clip, every claim that they're making. They prove it. Absolute, undeniable proof of every allegation they make."

Why conservatives ignore the popular culture is puzzling, to say the least. Naivete? Laziness? Intimidation? Arrogance? Take your pick – but until they focus their energies on the cultural media, where many, many times more people can be found than in the public policy arena, and make their voice heard loudly in the popular culture conversation, they will never succeed. The opposite also holds true: should conservatives choose to enter this arena, the results could be electrifying.

Which is not to say they haven't. Think about the hundreds, the thousands of discussions surrounding Jesus Christ. Now remember the movie, The Passion of the Christ. Which had a greater impact? Think about all the dissertations on liberty. Now watch Braveheart. Which resonated more? Flawed as he was Mel Gibson understood that there is no reason, none whatsoever, that conservatives can't be as successful as liberals, more so even when you consider the logical footing on which the conservative argument rests.

Finally, conservatives must commit to devoting the necessary resources to the technologies of the future. Social media is here to stay and the right has been AWOL. What do Facebook, Twitter, Tumblr, Pinterest, and so many other formats have in common? They are interactive, they are enormously popular, and, most important for this discussion, they are free, absolutely free of liberal control.

Conservatives can now communicate directly, instantaneously with millions upon millions of people, directing their messages, their way, when they want, where they want, and with whom they want. And by this time next year there will be a half-dozen new vehicles to transport our ideas.

The work of winning hearts and minds for America's original constitutional recipe is a daily grind, and there are few final victories. But we have no choice if we wish to transmit the spirit of 1776 to a tercentennial celebration, and beyond. A free and balanced media is crucial to the health of this country. Journalists should feel the duty – as outlined in the Society of Professional Journalists' Code of Ethics – to “distinguish between advocacy and news reporting,” that “[a]nalysis and commentary should be labeled and not misrepresent fact or context.”

They pledged to further democracy by “seeking truth and providing a fair and comprehensive account of events and issues.” But any honest examination of the national media in 2012 would say these trampled and forgotten pledges of professionalism should be stowed away in Washington, D.C., as an educational artifact in the “Newseum.”
