PART 2

This is the second of MRC Business's three-part series on Alex Soros, examining the new head of the Soros empire and one of the most influential men in the world.
EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

George Soros — the most notorious leftist billionaire in American politics — has chosen a successor to take over his $25-billion nonprofit empire. Thirty-seven-year-old Alex Soros is replacing his father and, based on his political history, he will be even worse.

The elder Soros named his self-proclaimed “more political” son Alex as the new leader of the Open Society Foundations in June. This follows after Alex was chosen to lead his father’s enormous political action committee — Democracy PAC — in 2022. Alex then oversaw at least $32,648,000 spent during the midterm elections to support leftist candidates.

Alex’s extreme views are evident because of the politicians and organizations he supports. He could well be more radical than his father on everything from abortion to climate change to the weaponization of race to demonize his political opponents.

- Alex Soros Led Father’s Super PAC, Which Spent $32 Million to Help the Left and Defeat Republicans in the 2022 Midterms

  Alex was tapped to lead his father’s enormous political action committee — Democracy PAC — in 2022 and oversaw at least $32,648,000 spent during the midterm elections to help the left stave off the expected “red wave” while crushing the right. The funds went to radical left-wing groups like Senate Majority PAC ($14 million) and Planned Parenthood Votes ($1 million). One million dollars also went to the leftist Black Voters Matter Action PAC, which spent more than that in 2020 to oust Georgia Republican Senators Kelly Loeffler and David Perdue. The PAC also released a racist 2023 ad against Kentucky Republican Attorney General and gubernatorial candidate Daniel Cameron, calling him “Uncle Daniel Cameron” and railed that “skinfolk ain't kinfolk.” The racialized ploy apparently helped, as Cameron went on to lose his election bid against incumbent Democrat Kentucky Governor Andy Beshear. Alex’s father also happened to claim the title of being the “largest donor” of the 2022 cycle, pouring at least $178 million into the midterms to support Democrats. A massive portion of that figure went specifically towards turbo-charging the elder Soros’ super PAC that his son was leading to boost the left’s electoral odds.

- Sits on Boards of Radical Leftist Institutions Pushing to Overhaul Global Academia

  Alex’s father launched the global Open Society University Network (OSUN) in January 2020 with $1 billion to indoctrinate the next generation with his extremist “open society” worldview. He said he considered it “to be the most important and enduring project of my life.” Alex is right in the thick of it. The two leftist institutions spearheading OSUN — Central European University (CEU) and Bard College — also got another $1.3 billion from the elder Soros, bringing the total expenditures toward realizing his educational goals to at least $2.3 billion. OSUN has promoted everything from hatred against the state of Israel to legitimizing the radical anti-Western philosophy of “transnational feminism.” Alex is a leading member of OSUN's “Management Committee” and also sits on the boards of both Bard and CEU.

- His Personal Foundation Gave Over $4 Million to 10 Radical Leftist Groups
  Alex Soros' own foundation donations are a clue to how he will run Open Society. His foundation funneled at least $4,097,465 between 2012 and 2021 to 10 radical leftist organizations like Bend the Arc: A Jewish Partnership for Justice, Global Witness, Center for a New American Security and Make the Road New York. These groups have done everything from weaponizing race to demonize Republicans; to calling for defunding the police; to sensationalizing climate change as a military problem; to pushing for government and Big Tech censorship of speech and to championing transgenderism and promoting sex changes for children without parental consent.

- 47% of His Foundation Funding Went to Radical Groups
  According to 990 tax data, nearly half (47%), or $4,097,465, of the roughly $8.8 million the Alex Soros Foundation spent on philanthropy between 2012 and 2021 went to hardcore leftist nonprofit groups pushing anti-American agendas. For example, Alex stated in 2016 that his father always used to point to Global Witness — a group Alex personally funds that pushes radical climate alarmism and Big Tech censorship — “as an example of how a little money can go a long way in philanthropy.”

- Established Ties with Top Democrats, 43 Major World Leaders
  Alex has spent years building his network both in the U.S and abroad. That means working with top Washington Democrats and visiting the White House at least 20 times, priming him for his rise to power. MRC Business totalled at least 43 world leaders that Alex met with, most even before he controlled the powerful foundations, promoting a wide range of leftist policy initiatives. Those include Pope Francis, French President Emmanuel Macron, Canadian Prime Minister Justin Trudeau and UN Secretary-General Antonio Guterres.

- Unhinged Hatred for the Right
  MRC Business exposed a number of wild statements Alex posted on social media or elsewhere revealing his radical nature. He considered the overturning of Roe v. Wade as one of the “worst” days in U.S. history and even sees the Republican Party as “the Confederacy.” In a July 21, 2019, tweet, Alex asserted that former President Donald Trump's efforts against abortion were a threat to global health. He even prophesied the possible “end of democracy” “civil war” if Trump were to be reelected in 2024.

GEORGE SOROS’S SON ALEX TAKES OVER OVER $25-BILLION LEFTIST EMPIRE.
HERE’S WHY HE COULD BE EVEN WORSE.

INTRODUCTION

If leftist billionaire George Soros was the king of funding the far left, his son Alex is now the crown prince and heir to the throne.

The elder Soros — who turned 93 in August — funneled over $32 billion into his Open Society Foundations (OSF) to perpetuate his dark vision for the world. That outlook promoted everything from climate change radicalism and easy access to abortion to open borders, racial strife and soft-on-crime policies. George Soros mostly did this from the shadows, spending hundreds of millions on media, radical left-wing groups and candidates that do his dirty work for him. Alex, who is more vocal with his radicalism, became the de facto spokesperson for his father’s anti-American, anti-western agenda. MRC Business recently exposed in two reports how George Soros in particular had been funding pro-Hamas groups for years after the terrorist organization launched its genocidal attacks on the state of Israel Oct. 7, 2023. MRC was also the first to resurface the elder Soros’ 2007 op-ed which underscores his anti-American and anti-Israel extremism: “America and Israel Must Open the Door to Hamas.”

George Soros officially named Alex his successor heading the $25-billion Open Society Foundations in June 2023. This followed after Alex was tapped to lead his father’s enormous political action committee — Democracy PAC — in 2022 and oversaw at least $32,648,000 spent during the midterm elections. Those funds went to radical left-wing groups like Senate Majority PAC ($14 million) and Planned Parenthood Votes ($1 million). One million dollars also went to the leftist Black Voters Matter Action PAC, which denigrates minority GOP leaders if their political views don’t align with its leftist dogma.

This kind of spending helped leftists prevent the much-predicted “red wave” and established a lawmaking apparatus that supported Alex’s extreme views. Now, he has been given the keys to a nonprofit empire to ensure the kind of left-wing, anti-American ideas promoted by his father are spread across the globe. For example, Alex heaped praise on the dystopian European Union as a “global beacon of the values that shape our work” in an Aug. 31, 2023, Politico op-ed.

A 2024 win for Trump, claimed Alex, would mean greater doom for the EU than the U.S. “As someone who spends up to half their time working on the Continent and thinks former United States President Donald Trump — or at least someone with his isolationist and anti-European policies — will be the Republican nominee,” Alex mourned. “I believe a MAGA-style Republican victory in next year’s U.S. presidential election could, in the end, be worse for the EU than for the U.S.”

Alex is wasting no time with his new power. He laid off at least 40% of OSF’s staff supposedly for the purpose of launching “significant changes to the foundation’s operating model.” Alex showed himself to be even more radically leftist than his father, from supporting abortion and climate change activism to pushing outright anti-American propaganda.

The Soros heir described the overturning of Roe v. Wade (1973) as one of the “worst” days in U.S. history and even called the Republican Party “the Confederacy.” In a July 21, 2019 tweet, Alex asserted that Trump’s efforts against the baby-killing act of abortion were a threat to global health:

But the new 37-year old head of the Soros empire doesn’t limit his activism to the words and statements he puts on the internet. He’s clearly learned well from his father how to keep the anti-American movement’s gravy train running smoothly through his own fortune and through his former position as OSF’s deputy chairman.

Alex has been actively using his and his father’s massive coffers in addition to his own political power to fuel left-wing groups dedicated to pushing his radical anti-American views.

He even prophesied the possible “end of democracy” and “civil war” if former President Donald Trump were to be reelected in 2024.

In addition, Alex shared a blog on Twitter in 2020 by the leftist Brennan Center for Justice — which his father funded to the tune of $4,800,000 between 2016-2021 alone. That blog, headlined, “The Electoral College's Racist Origins,” called for the abolishment of the Electoral College. Alex promoted a radical quote from that blog in his tweet:
into its framework from around the world, including the United States. Alex is also a board member for the two Soros-funded institutions spearheading the OSUN mission: Central European University and Bard College.

But even controlling academia isn’t enough for Alex and his father. Alex has been actively seeking to insert his influence into the halls of power on the world stage.

It’s as if he has these global policymakers on speed dial and took on the mantle of being the unofficial ambassador for the Biden administration.

Alex’s activism and extremism are a continuation of the self-obsessed worldview that his father had been pursuing for decades.

George Soros once boasted that “[i]t is a sort of disease when you consider yourself some kind of god, the creator of everything, but I feel comfortable about it now since I began to live it out,” according to The Independent in 1993. In addition, The Los Angeles Times’s reporting in 2004 further emphasized the bloated view that Soros has of himself: “Next to my fantasies about being God, I also have very strong fantasies of being mad.” “I am kind of a nut who wants to have an impact,” he told late New York Times reporter Michael T. Kaufman for his 2002 book Soros: The Life and Times of a Messianic Billionaire. Soros even saw himself as some sort of anomaly of nature:

“I am something unnatural. I’m very comfortable with my public persona because it is one I have created for myself.”

The standards Alex had to reach to satisfy his father’s self-confessed god-complex should signal that he could easily be an even more dangerous figure in American culture and society.

This report is the second in a three-part MRC Business series on the Soros empire. The first part was released earlier in 2023 and examined the unhinged statements and political positions of George Soros’ new heir.

Alex made regular contact with some of the world’s most powerful leaders in the world. These include:

- Joe Biden
  President of The United States

- Pope Francis

- Justin Trudeau
  Canadian Prime Minister

- General Antonio Guterres
  United Nations Secretary
Alex isn’t new to spearheading his father’s radical pet projects. His role leading his father’s massive super PAC shows how dedicated he is to realizing the dark Soros vision for both the American government and the grassroots.

Alex oversaw at least $32,648,000 spent during the 2022 midterm elections, according to OpenSecrets data.

The funding went to radical groups pressing to elect leftist candidates to office and to kneecap the forecasted “red wave.” His father also happened to be crowned the “largest donor” of the cycle, pouring at least $178 million into the midterms to support Democrats. A massive portion of that figure went specifically towards turbo-charging the elder Soros’ super PAC that his son was leading to boost the left’s electoral odds.

Democracy PAC’s funds went to radical left-wing groups like Senate Majority PAC ($14 million) to maintain Democrats’ control over the Senate and to the radical Planned Parenthood Votes ($1 million) to help elect candidates who would carry out the left’s abortion agenda. One million dollars also went to the leftist Black Voters Matter Action PAC, which spent $62,768 more than that in 2020 against Georgia Republican Senators Kelly Loeffler and David Perdue to oust them from their respective seats. There’s much more.

Black Voters Matter Action PAC also released a racist 2023 ad against Kentucky Republican Attorney General and gubernatorial candidate Daniel Cameron, calling him “Uncle Daniel Cameron” and railing that “skinfolk ain’t kinfolk.” The racialized ploy apparently helped, as Cameron went on to lose his election bid against incumbent Democrat Kentucky Governor Andy Beshear.

BlackPAC, another racially charged super PAC that received $750,000 from Democracy PAC, bragged about its efforts that led to a string of electoral victories for radical candidates, including Sen. Raphael Warnock (D-GA), who is notorious for his extreme abortion views.

“BlackPAC’s organizing apparatus was the largest independent effort in the state,” the group said of Warnock’s reelection bid in Georgia.

“Here’s how we did it: BlackPAC, along with our sister organization BPAC, knocked on 4.2 million doors throughout Georgia encouraging voters in our community to use their power. More than three thousand of our canvassers spoke to nearly 800,000 voters at their homes to encourage them to cast their ballots.”

The Soros cash definitely helped this gargantuan effort pay off, as Warnock would go on to win.
George Soros launched the global Open Society University Network in January 2020 with $1 billion to completely indoctrinate the next generation in world academia with his extremist “open society” worldview. He said he considered it “to be the most important and enduring project of my life.” His son is positioned right in the thick of it.

The two leftist institutions spearheading OSUN — Central European University (which the elder Soros founded) and Bard College — both received another $1.3 billion from George Soros, bringing Soros' total expenditures toward realizing his educational goals to at least $2.3 billion.

OSUN is a global university network with at least 44 member academic institutions around the world grafted in so far to promote Soros' worldview, including U.S.-based institutions like Arizona State University and the University of California, Berkeley Human Rights Center.

Alex serves as a member on the leadership boards of both Bard and CEU, and is also prominently featured as a leading member of OSUN’s “Management Committee.”

The Soros education juggernaut is unlike anything the world has ever seen. Both CEU and Bard have a history of promoting extremism on a number of fronts. Those support the educational philosophy of Soros' global university network that both institutions are co-pioneering.

Bard College professor emeritus of history Gennady Shkliarevsky rebuked his institution for joining with Soros’ political agenda for education. In 2020, he called the Open Society University Network the “making of an unholy alliance”:

“The motivation for creating the OSUN is political. The OSUN will use education as a tool for ideological and political purposes—to advance and promote the vision and ideology of open society. Combining education with ideological and political goals can amount to indoctrination.”

The programs OSUN has already initiated provide critical insight into the left-wing propaganda it is seeking to download into the minds of the next generation. For example, OSUN legitimized the anti-Semitic narrative that Israel is an oppressor and enabler of “apartheid” against the Hamas-run Palestine. In a May 4, 2021, post headlined, “Reclaiming the Palestinian Narrative By Centering Human Rights,” OSUN’s Center for Human Rights and the Arts expressed solidarity with the Palestine-based Al Quds University and Al Quds Bard College campus by hosting a discussion panel lambasting the Israeli state.

It propagandized how one of the panelists drew attention to “the recent reports by Palestinian, Israeli, and international human rights organizations that have claimed Israeli government policies toward Palestinians amount to apartheid.”
This looks even worse in light of Hamas’ attacks against Israel Oct. 7, 2023, when the terrorist group launched thousands of rockets into Israeli cities and proceeded to rape women, murder civilians and children and kidnap the elderly. The attacks resulted in more than 1,400 people in Israel being killed with about 240 — which included children — being taken hostage by Hamas. At least 33 Americans were also killed with another 10 unaccounted for.

The harrowing events also resurfaced Alex’s father’s notorious lambasting of Israel and the U.S. for not normalizing relations with Hamas in a 2007 op-ed headlined: “America and Israel Must Open the Door to Hamas.” It looks like OSUN isn’t departing far from its founder’s anti-Israel vision.

But anti-Israel radicalism isn’t the only bastion of left-wing propaganda that OSUN seeks to infuse into world education. One of the global curriculum projects OSUN is spearheading is called “TRANSNATIONAL FEMINISM, SOLIDARITY, AND SOCIAL JUSTICE.”

A part of its mission to combat “narrow, Western feminist ideals” apparently included trying to sell a course by OSUN member American University of Central Asia called “Islamic Feminism,” which promotes the unusual idea that “[t]he introduction of Islam improved women’s status substantially.” The course sought to slap down depictions of Muslim women “as oppressed.” The course was specifically tailored to fighting Western feminism.

CEU and Bard in particular are also masters of leftist indoctrination in their own right.

One of CEU’s recent presidents demanded progressives be tougher on Trump’s “ethnic nationalism.” Bard College held an event in November 2020 headlined, “READING THE SIGNS IN AN ERA OF SYSTEMIC RACISM,” which accused America of harboring systemic racism. Specifically, the event was engineered to “shine some light on systemic racism and anti-racist alternatives in our everyday surroundings.” Bard even offered a course in 2021 headlined, “Abolishing Prisons and the Police.”

In 2016, Bard College President Leon Botstein, who is also OSUN’s chancellor, penned an op-ed for TIME magazine alleging that the election of Trump “Was About Racism Against Barack Obama.” That piece made an outrageous “cautionary comparison” between the European anti-Semitism that led to the Holocaust of the Jewish people and the Americans who elected Trump. As Botstein wrote: “What post-Trump white America has expressed by endorsing Trump’s campaign to ‘Make America Great Again’ is not merely anger against elites in general but targeted resentment against the recent history of success by Americans of color.”

In 2018, then-CEU President and Rector John Shattuck penned an anti-Trump attack op-ed headlined, “How Democracy in America Can Survive Donald Trump.” Shattuck slammed Trump’s 2016 election as a byproduct of America’s Electoral College system, which he deemed a corrupt relic. “The Electoral College that propelled Donald Trump into office despite his loss of the popular vote is a dangerous remnant of the compromise made to protect the institution of slavery at the time the Constitution was written.”

Current CEU President and Rector Shalini Randeria’s podcast Democracy in Question attacked Republican-led states on Sept. 15, 2021, for instituting voter ID laws. Her guest for the podcast was none other than the Soros-funded left-wing activist and failed Georgia gubernatorial candidate Stacey Abrams. “The most pernicious assault on American democracy today are the laws and measures enacted in various state legislatures under Republican control that aim at voter restriction,” the caption to Randeria’s interview with Abrams railed.

It is this cesspool of extremism that Alex will use his newly acquired powers to spread across the globe into the minds of students both at home and abroad.
Funds Radical Leftist Groups that Despise American Values

Alex clearly took after his father in financing anti-American groups that spread extremist messaging. One of the best ways to analyze that is to look at how Alex handled his own charity contributions. Although he was nowhere near as wealthy as his father, the millions he donated in a 10-year period signaled the extent of his radicalism.

Nearly half of the roughly $8.8 million the Alex Soros Foundation spent between 2012 and 2021 went to 10 radical leftist organizations.

47% ($4,097,465) was given to radical groups. Source: 990 Tax Data

Most Radical Alex-Soros-Backed Groups Include:

Bend The Arc: A Jewish Partnership For Justice

Make The Road New York

Global Witness

Center for a New American Security

These groups did everything from weaponizing race to demonizing Republicans as being the greatest threat to the Jewish people in the U.S to calling for defunding the police. One group also has a demonstrable obsession with sensationalizing climate change as being a military problem while other groups push for government and Big Tech censorship of speech that opposes leftist narratives and champions radical transgenderism.

With new complete access to his father’s multibillion-dollar foundations, Alex now can put the extremist agenda into overdrive.
Bend the Arc:
Weaponizing Race to Demonize the Right

Bend the Arc’s left-wing radicalism indicates the disturbing direction Alex will likely take his father’s foundations.

Alex is “founding chair” of Bend the Arc: Jewish Action and boasts proudly of his affiliation with the openly anti-GOP group on OSF’s website. “By setting the stage for white nationalist violence, [President Donald] Trump and the Republican Party represent the greatest threat to Jews in this country,” an individual claimed in a Bend the Arc “WE RISE AS ONE” 2020 campaign video.

In 2018, while Alex was deputy chairman of OSF, it gave out a $200,000 grant to Bend the Arc: Jewish Action, which is also the advocacy arm of the leftist nonprofit Bend the Arc: A Jewish Partnership for Justice.

The nonprofit in particular was founded in 2012 and Alex’s own foundation gave it at least $350,000. OSF also gave the nonprofit $1,233,500 between 2016 and 2020.

The language of just one of Bend the Arc’s 2020 campaign videos illustrates how Alex views the approximately 38.8 million voters in the U.S. who are registered Republicans. Bend the Arc is a project that routinely smears the Republican Party as supposedly plagued by white supremacy and anti-Semitism. Alex Soros told Forbes magazine in 2016 that his “work with Bend the Arc (BTA) is very important to me.”

Bend the Arc’s propaganda is inflammatory. Following the mass shooting at a Pittsburgh synagogue in 2018 that left 11 dead and six wounded, Bend the Arc turned the slaughter into a political club to wield against then-President Trump.

Eleven members of the nonprofit’s Pittsburgh affiliate penned a letter to Trump blaming him for the slaughter and telling him he wasn’t welcome in the city until he denounced white nationalism.

“For the past three years your words and your policies have emboldened a growing white nationalist movement. You yourself called the murderer evil, but yesterday’s violence is the direct culmination of your influence,” members of the group claimed in the letter.

The hyperbolic letter was posted on the advocacy group’s website. But the Bend the Arc apparatus has been using this kind of racially charged rhetoric against Trump for years.

On May 4, 2016 — during election season — Alex’s Bend the Arc tweeted out a statement by its then-CEO Stosh Cotler and captioned it: “@realDonaldTrump may have secured the GOP nomination today, but the fight to defeat him is just starting.” Cotler’s statement, which was also posted on the advocacy group’s website, was laced with vitriolic hyperbole accusing Trump of “bigotry.”

“American history is filled with figures who sought to gain power by exploiting fear and sowing division. The bigotry that the Trump campaign espouses is not new,” Cotler decried. “But this November, American Jews will have the opportunity to join with tens of millions of Americans from communities across the country to send a clear, unmistakable message to the Trump campaign: not in our America. Not on our watch.”

Alex actively promoted similar racial arguments on a regular basis. He elevated a 2019 petition on Twitter by the group’s advocacy arm accusing Trump of being a threat to the Jewish people.

Bend the Arc also launched the “How to Fight Antisemitism Project,” which characterizes the entire Republican Party as having anti-Semitism embedded into its framework:

“It isn’t just Trump. As 61% of American Jews know, antisemitism is a problem in the Republican Party. To fight it, we have to understand how antisemitism — along with racism, xenophobia, and Islamophobia — is part of the machinery of division and fear, and learn to recognize when right-wing extremists use that machine for political and material gain.”

But the advocacy arm isn’t content with simply going after the Republican Party. It shows no hesitation in targeting members of the Jewish community who happen to be Trump supporters.

The group put out an Oct. 16, 2016, press release headlined: “Bend the Arc Jewish Action Calls Out Republican Jewish Coalition for Continued Support for Donald Trump.” The press release accused Trump of “incitement” and “violence” and wielded the infamous Access Hollywood Tape to accuse the Republican Jewish Coalition of forfeiting Jewish values by refusing to “relinquish their endorsement.”

Make the Road New York: A Trans-Obsessed, Defund-the-Police Operation

Apparently, Alex Soros doesn't have any issue working with groups that advocate to defund the police. His and OSF's heavy financing of the racially charged Make the Road New York group are case in point.

Make the Road exploited the killing of George Floyd into a politicized, anti-police charge across New York City. "New Yorkers demand our City #DefundNYPD and ensure #PoliceFreeSchools, which is brutalizing Black and Brown communities," read a 2020 call-to-action campaign by the group. The demand, claimed the group, was a city "budget that significantly cuts the bloated NYPD."

OSF donated $1,465,000 to Make the Road between 2015 and 2021, while Alex was deputy chairman. The Alex Soros Foundation also gave the anti-police group a $50,000 grant in 2012.

Make the Road boasted in a June 11, 2020, blog post how a string of mass protests it organized with allies led the New York State legislature to join in on its campaign. "In response to the recent mass protests and years of organizing by Make the Road NY and allies, this week the state legislature passed a package of bills to give people more power to police the police."

The only "way forward," Make the Road proposed, "is to defund the NYPD and invest in the resources our communities need. Take action now!" The group called on New York City residents to pressure city council members to defund the police force.

"Defunding the police means prioritizing public services, investing in communities," read a June 30, 2020, QNS story that Make the Road reposted on its website. The local news site emphasized Make the Road's call to defund the NYPD. The article highlighted the group's fury that then-Mayor Bill de Blasio's plan to gut $1 billion from the NYPD was "inadequate." De Blasio's plan also called... for cutting a July police cadet class of 1,100 and reallocating 5,000 unarmed but uniformed “school safety agents” from the NYPD to the city’s Department of Education.

Make the Road tweeted out an open letter that it signed along with other organizations demanding “#PoliceFreeSchools.” The racialized letter read like an Antifa screed:

“The data is clear: cops in our schools criminalize young people along racial lines at disproportionate rates with near impunity,” the letter said. “Black and Brown students continue to make up 90% of students arrested in our schools. Keeping cops in our schools means we will continue to be policed and harassed for the color of our skin — in the very buildings that are supposed to teach and support us.”

The organization posted a video of a “#PoliceFreeSchools” protest to current NYC Mayor Eric Adams (D) in April 2022: “Hey @NYCMayor Public safety is not predicated on police presence, but instead, the amount of resources available for communities.”

Alex has also expressed anti-police sentiments. On May 25, 2021, he tweeted:

In the year since #GeorgeFloyd was killed we have seen an unprecedented appetite at the local level for real police reform and racial justice. We cannot rest until the demands for accountability are met and meaningful federal legislation is passed because Black Lives Matter.

Defunding the police isn’t the only agenda item for Make the Road. It is on the forefront of the radicalized LGBTQ movement’s actions in the culture war.

The group promoted a co-sponsored “Transgender Forum” facts sheet in February 2018 that promoted sex changes for children without parental consent under a subsection headlined: “Trans Youth and Healthcare Access.” “Healthcare autonomy remains an issue for young people seeking gender-confirming medical care,” the sheet read, elevating a survey decrying the so-called “disparities in outcomes” for transgender patients seeking gender-affirming procedures. The sheet’s language was just flat-out disturbing:

“For trans youth, this means that individuals who are under the age of 18 and are married, emancipated or a parent can consent to taking hormones or getting other treatment without a parent, guardian, or foster care agency getting involved. Some legal service providers write letters on behalf of trans youth explaining that they are emancipated for the purposes of seeking gender-confirming healthcare.”

In March 2023, the group also celebrated the leftist “#TransDayOfVisibility.” “[W]e embrace our trans, non-binary and gender-diverse community members and celebrate their lives & experiences. This day is dedicated to honoring their accomplishments while raising awareness of the work still needed to achieve trans justice,” the group claimed.

In 2015, Alex celebrated how Make the Road was supposedly one of a number of “fantastic” leftist organizations he funded “making a positive impact.”

An entire wing of Make the Road is dedicated to so-called “TGNCIQ Justice.” TGNCIQ is an acronym within the framework of the alphabet soup of the LGBTQ movement that stands for “transgender, gender non-conforming, intersex, and queer.”

The group recently promoted its “12th #TransLatinxMarch” led by its Trans Immigrant Project members on July 15, 2023. “For 12 years, trans women have led this march to highlight the struggles, needs, joy, and complexities of their trans experiences and existence.” The purpose of the march was to supposedly “demand an end to employment discrimination and violence against trans people, and more protections for trans sex workers.”

The group’s promotional video was disturbing, as it included a child appearing to march alongside a large number of transsexual adults.
Alex also called for the decriminalization of “sex work” on social media. “Sex workers are one of the most marginalized groups in the world, and the decriminalization of sex work is imperative to the improvement of their lives,” the Soros heir stated in an August 19, 2015, Instagram post.

Make the Road's fixation on blanketing NYC with transgender politics appears to know no bounds. The group pushed the “#TransLatinXMarc!” protest on X (formerly known as Twitter), celebrating how “100s [were] shut[ting] down the streets of Jackson Heights demanding an end to employment discrimination and violence against our Trans and Queer communities.”

It attributed de Blasio's 2016 executive order mandating public restrooms be available on the basis of whatever gender identity one chooses as a credit to the protests it organized in favor of the disgusting policy: “After years of organizing with allies, Mayor de Blasio signed an Executive Order that protects the right to use City-owned restrooms that align with one's gender identity.”

Make the Road also showed itself to be radically leftist when it came to illegal immigration and national security. In 2017, the group championed how it helped organize an unprecedented mobilization of 30,000 New Yorkers to Battery Park and then through the streets of Manhattan, demanding that Trump’s executive orders on illegal immigration and a travel ban from countries with high terror threats “be rescinded and that he stop his policies of hate.” The group dubiously referred to the travel ban as the “Muslim ban,” despite the order having nothing to do with religious discrimination.

It also actively opposed construction of a southern border wall and ramping up immigration enforcement. A Make the Road New York blog, headlined “Keeping up the resistance,” channeled Marxist revolutionary language: “Now it's clear that there is no stopping us. Our sister organizations in New Jersey, Connecticut and Pennsylvania are also throwing down like never before – we’ll share more about their inspiring work soon.”

The organization celebrated how its so-called Immigrant Defense Project led to the passage of New York State’s anti-police Protect Our Courts Act (POCA). “This makes it unlawful for any law enforcement officer, including Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) to make an arrest in or near state courthouses.”
Alex Soros has extensively involved himself with a climate change extremist group that has a particular knack for pressuring Big Tech to silence free speech online.

The group Global Witness works to “hold companies and governments to account for their destruction of the environment, their disregard for the planet and their failure to protect” human rights. Part of its anti-fossil fuel vendetta includes campaigns to “tackle the spread of division, hate and disinformation on digital platforms.” That is code for trying to get Big Tech platforms like Facebook, X (formerly Twitter) and YouTube to censor speech according to what Global Witness determines should and should not be allowed. This kind of activism appears to be right up Alex Soros’ alley.

OSF, which Alex now runs, funded Global Witness with a whopping $17,657,000 between 2016 and 2020.

Alex’s foundation not only gave out at least $1,830,000 to the group between 2013 and 2017, but he even held an advisory position at Global Witness. He also personally promoted how Global Witness was one of his foundation’s “first grantees.”

Global Witness placed heavy pressure on Big Tech platforms like Facebook and TikTok to increase censoring so-called election “disinformation” prior to the 2022 midterm elections.

The group issued an Oct. 21, 2022, press release headlined “Facebook and TikTok fail to block deceptive ads with blatant US midterms disinformation.” The group claimed its “experiment” was engineered to “determine how well social media platforms are living up to their promises to stop disinformation that can destabilize democratic processes.”

Global Witness boasted in April 2023 how its “findings” were wielded by Democratic members of Congress as a cudgel against TikTok CEO Shou Zi Chew for not doing enough to censor so-called “election disinformation” ahead of the 2022 midterms.

“My father and Aryeh Neier, the former President of the Open Society Foundations, used to always point to Global Witness as an example of how a little money can go a long way in philanthropy,” Alex told Forbes magazine in 2016.
Global Witness has been putting the Soros empire’s “little money” to use. The group’s “digital threats” campaign is specifically focused on pressuring governments to regulate speech on social media. “The Big Tech companies are not too big to be made to change, and change does not rely on significant numbers of us having to stop using the digital products these companies provide,” Global Witness claimed.

Alex himself issued a call to action for Biden to crack down on so-called “disinformation” online.

Only a few months later, Biden’s Department of Homeland Security announced the formulation of its infamous Disinformation Governance Board in April 2022, which was shown to have close ties to Alex’s father.

Global Witness is channeling Alex’s views on climate as well. In March 2022, the group put out a press release decrying the existence of so-called “climate disinformation” on Facebook. “The climate divide: How Facebook’s algorithm amplifies climate disinformation,” read the headline.

The organization kicked off its argument with the claim that “over 99.9% of scientists agree about the impact of human activity on climate change” based on a paper released by Cornell University researchers, and lambasted Facebook for not doing enough to censor arguments that go against the left’s climate propaganda. Its solution: sic government regulators on social media platforms to police speech, including those from the United States and the European Union:

“Self-regulation is not working. Governments must step in and legislate against the power of Big Tech to shape our realities in dangerous and divisive ways that threaten to derail progress toward tackling the greatest challenge our planet collectively faces.”

The organization even listed some of the blacklisted ideas that in its view should be censored on Big Tech platforms:

- “Warming models are inaccurate,
- “Mitigation solutions won’t work or are otherwise bad for society.”

The climate change radical worldview isn't universal, despite the claim. Climate scientist and former Chair of the School Earth and Atmospheric Sciences at the Georgia Institute of Technology Judith Curry told journalist John Stossel Aug. 9, 2023: The appearance of consensus is “manufactured.” She even stated that climate scientists and science journal editors are put into a position where peddling alarmism is the most secure way to advance their careers and get funding:

“Promote the alarming papers! Don’t even send the other ones out for review. If you wanted to advance in your career, like be at a prestigious university and get a big salary, have big laboratory space, get lots of grant funding, be director of an institute, there was clearly one path to go.”

Global Witness apparently holds no patience for users posting skepticism of climate-change radicalism on digital town squares. The organization was a signatory to a Nov. 9, 2021, open letter along with many other eco-activist organizations to Big Tech CEOs at Google, Facebook, Twitter, Instagram, TikTok, Pinterest and Reddit demanding that Silicon Valley implement a “zero tolerance approach” on users to “tackle the threat of climate misinformation and disinformation.”

Global Witness’s demands directly violate the tenets of the scientific method, which necessitates criticism. The Stanford Encyclopedia of Philosophy summarized... the views of late philosopher Karl Popper, who “stressed that, regardless of the amount of confirming evidence, we can never be certain that a hypothesis is true without committing the fallacy of affirming the consequent.” The elder Soros, ironically, was Popper’s student. But Global Witness apparently doesn’t care about maintaining scientific debate or free speech for that matter.

Global Witness and the other organizations argued for Big Tech to institute the same heavy-handed censorship policies employed surrounding discussion on COVID-19 on the climate change debate: “Implement climate misinformation and disinformation policies and enforcement that extend to content, algorithms and advertising, similar to the robust COVID 19 policies that have been published over the last 18 months.”

Climate change isn’t the only area where Global Witness tried to throw its weight around with Big Tech.

Global Witness put out a June 12, 2023, press release lambasting Facebook's parent company Meta for the offense of “gender discrimination” for supposedly promoting more jobs to men than to women.

“Across [France, Ireland, the Netherlands, India, South Africa, and the UK.] Facebook’s algorithm resulted in 90.9% of ads for a mechanic being seen by men, whilst 78.6% of ads for preschool teachers were seen by women.”

The leftist organization used the talking point to place major political pressure on the French and Dutch governments to strong-arm Facebook into embracing its demands for woke gender standards.

“The need to apply our rights in this age of algorithms, automated decision-making and AI is more pressing than ever,” claimed Global Witness Digital Threats Campaign Leader Naomi Hirst. “We call on the regulators in France and the Netherlands to properly investigate these complaints and enforce the equality legislations that people fought for over many years. They must put an end to the exceptionalism enjoyed by social media platforms that allows them to ride roughshod over our hard-won right to equality.”
Center for a New American Security: Designed to Push Soros’ Extremist Agenda

The Center for a New American Security's agenda to turn leftist pipe dreams into reality makes it a potent ally for Alex's radical agenda.

The center is engineered toward fulfilling a variety of the items on the Soros empire's global agenda, especially fighting so-called "disinformation" and climate change.

OSF funneled $1,285,550 to CNAS between 2016 and 2020 alone, while the Alex Soros Foundation gave another $250,000 in 2016.

The center capitalized on the death of George Floyd during the 2020 race riots to criticize veteran service organizations for not being more vocal in support of the Marxist Black Lives Matter movement. "Military service looks different for minority communities, and simply 'working hard' won't undo the systemic racism, homophobia, sexism, and xenophobia at the core of the U.S. military experience," the center decried. The group also railed against the notion that once American military officers put on the uniform "We all bleed green," and called it a "myth."

The center showed particular interest in promoting censorship ideas.

During the 2020 election, the group posted an Oct. 2, 2020, podcast called Brussels Sprouts praising the work of self-proclaimed "Mary Poppins of Disinformation" Nina Jankowicz. She drummed up fear about Russia peddling and amplifying disinformation online (eg. social media platforms) to influence the presidential election and called for aggressive censorship policies.

Jankowicz was eventually chosen to lead the Biden administration's Disinformation Governance Board, which was targeting Americans’ speech. One whistleblower document published by Sen. Josh Hawley (R-MO) cited so-called “domestic violent extremist (DVE) groups” who supposedly amplify and exploit narratives in the public discourse. This includes alleged “disinformation surrounding the validity of the 2020 election underpinning calls to violence on January 6, 2021.” The board was eventually dissolved following public backlash after MRC Business revealed that the Soros empire was deeply connected to its leadership.

During the 2020 center podcast, Jankowicz accused then-President Trump of undermining U.S. policy on fighting "Russian disinformation." Jankowicz had the audacity to put "disinformation" emanating from the domestic front and Russian front on the same threat level:

“The main point I would make is it's not really important whether it's false information coming from Russia or false information coming from a hyper-partisan political actor in the United States. The ultimate effect is the same and we all play a part in its amplification.”

During the podcast, she even championed using federal funding for the 50 U.S. states to implement their own so-called “nonpartisan media literacy and digital literacy curriculum. Not only in schools but for voting-age populations.”

She also lamented to the hosts that the Honest Ads Act hadn’t passed Congress yet. The bill, as Heritage Foundation policy analyst John York pointed out in 2019, was introduced under the deceptive guise of “requir[ing] that internet platforms, television, and radio stations ‘make reasonable efforts to ensure that (electioneering) communications ... are not purchased by a foreign nation [e.g. Russia], directly or indirectly.'” But as York noted, “[T]he most sweeping provisions of the Honest Ads Act would not impact foreign meddlers at all. They are targeted directly at restricting the First Amendment rights of American citizens.”

Jankowicz appeared to hint at this. She claimed that the failure to make the HAA law to regulate online advertising “leaves open a huge loophole not just for foreign disinformers who want to influence but for the domestic ones as well,” meaning American citizens.

She let it be known that she wasn’t comfortable with letting Big Tech platforms like Facebook and Google police and censor content on their own. In fact, she stated that there should be a regulatory “ombudsman” at the federal level “that’s going to be enforcing these rules and there’s much more to do even beyond the Honest Ads Act.”

Host and Transatlantic Security Program Director Andrea Kendall-Taylor celebrated Jankowicz’s argument: “This has been so helpful and such an important point.” The “hope,” said Kendall-Taylor to Jankowicz, “is certainly if there is a change in administration next year that we will have a leader [Biden] at the top who recognizes the importance of [disinformation] that will hopefully address it in a non-politicized way.” Jankowicz, who would go on to lead the short-lived DGB, Jankowicz is a Biden donor.

Alex promoted Jankowicz’s work as well. He tweeted out her Nov. 30, 2021, anti-disinformation article that was illustrated by a photo of a shadowy figure wearing Trump’s signature “Make America Great Again” hat. The article, headlined “How Disinformation Corrodes Democracy,” demanded that Biden confront the “Scourge of False Narratives.”

Disinformation tears the fabric of democracy. President Biden must generate meaningful commitments from those attending the Summit for Democracy, and recognize that disinformation is not a niche issue but an urgent problem.

But exploiting the specter of disinformation to justify the targeting of Americans’ speech is only one piece of what the center does. The group is also obsessed with treating climate change as a military problem.

In 2008, the center, “with a consortium of ten partner organizations, hosted ‘Clout and Climate Change,’ an international climate change ‘war game’ to explore the national security implications of global climate change.” The organization put out a briefing book that treated climate change as being a precursor to “international conflict” and necessitating “global action.”

The center continued the climate change-as-warfare strategy. In March 2022, it put out a blog headlined
“A Climate Change–Ready Force,” which called on the Department of Defense to adopt an eco-centrist focus to the technologies it invests in with taxpayer dollars. “Building a climate change–ready force will require integrating and adopting innovative climate technologies across the entire DoD.” Once again, the center promoted the idea that climate change was directly correlated with military preparedness:

“Overall, DoD investments in climate technology will improve military readiness and resiliency, strengthen U.S. geopolitical influence with allies, and benefit the American economy. Empowering the Defense Innovation Unit to invest in climate technology will prepare the U.S. military for conflicts in an uncertain future and a changing climate.”

This kind of extremism is parallel with Alex Soros’ argument to Mongabay magazine in 2016 that climate change should become the new civil rights movement. “I also think that if environmental defenders become the Rosa Parks[es] and the Caesar Chavezes of the environmental movement, the movement will gain unprecedented traction.”

The center is certainly dedicated to Alex’s vision. As part of its The Pitch: A Competition of New Ideas series, it promoted a commentary piece that called for the United States to infuse “climate diplomacy” into State Department prerogatives as a supposed national security interest.

The author, Jacqueline White Menchaca, kicked off her piece with what sounded like the premise to an eco-activist manifesto. “The climate catastrophe is one of the most pressing and consequential challenges of the 21st century. Its impacts will extend beyond the immediate environmental consequences that are already unfolding,” Menchaca wrote. She proclaimed that the United States could “no longer” wait to pursue its “climate agenda.”

To achieve its radical climate ambitions, according to Menchaca, the U.S. needed to establish “a climate cone, or specialized track, in the U.S. State Department’s Foreign Service that is dedicated to tackling climate change, its security and economic risks, and the challenges of global coordination.”
Alex Soros Turns World Leader

Alex Soros doesn't just sit behind a desk. His father was once characterized as "the only man in the United States who has his own foreign policy and can implement it." Alex has taken that role into the field, meeting world leaders and spreading his influence at a wide variety of international conferences and organizations.

He promotes this fact, posting and tweeting about how he met with at least 43 world leaders abroad since 2016. That's in addition to at least nine prominent leaders of the Democratic Party during the same time period. Most of that was before he was the new head of the Open Society Foundations. Now he has the money and the connections to wield influence like his father.

 Appearing with Politicians, While Family Funds Their Elections

Prominent leftists politicians owe a debt of gratitude to the Soros family for bankrolling their campaigns. Many in turn made themselves available when Alex came to town.

Before he stepped down from his foundations, George Soros spent $178 million over the course of the 2022 election cycle to help left-wing candidates.

That followed over $9 million in the 2020 cycle, over $20 million in the 2018 cycle, and over $22 million in the 2016 cycle. The 2022 figure shows a dramatic escalation in political expenditures since 2016. In total, Soros has spent more than $229 million in just the past four elections alone.

The elder Soros donated $700,000 to the Biden Victory Fund in 2020. Alex Soros became a White House fixture since Biden's inauguration, holding at least 20 meetings with Biden officials, particularly with those in national security posts. In addition to these 20 meetings, Alex Soros also met with Vice President Kamala Harris on June 6, 2023, staying with her from 4:00 p.m. till midnight, according to visitor logs.

Alex was also rewarded with an invite to a state dinner with prominent NATO ally French President Emmanuel Macron. Alex had meetings with both then-presidential candidate Joe Biden and his running mate during the 2020 campaign. From 2016-2023, Alex repeatedly spoke with powerful Democrats such as former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, and then-Democratic vice presidential nominee Tim Kaine, in addition to a number of key congressional leaders.

House Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries, who received $300,000 from George Soros this year, has met with Alex Soros on a number of occasions. His coordination with Alex Soros has been documented by Fox News, which noted that Soros hosted Jeffries and other Democrats at a New York event. CNN also mentioned an event at Alex's apartment, putting it into the context of Jeffries's fundraising efforts. On his Instagram page, Soros posted a picture with Jeffries in May 2022, celebrated Jeffries' rise to power in December 2022, and hosted Jeffries in June of 2023.

Former House Speaker Nancy Pelosi was also regularly in touch with Alex. She attended several events with him. In 2016, she spoke at "Pursuing Justice 2016," the first national conference of Alex Soros' radical group Bend the Arc, which was the same conference that invited infamous anti-Semite Linda Sarsour.

In 2022, Alex Soros had dinner with Pelosi at the Munich Security Conference, which he advertised as an Open Society Foundations and European Council on Foreign Affairs official dinner at @munseccion on Ukraine. She sat beside Alex Soros at the 2023 Munich Security Conference as well. Soros also posted a picture of himself sitting next to Pelosi at the Congressional Progressive Caucus’s Strategy Summit’s award dinner.

Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer is another key beneficiary of Soros’ political spending. Alex Soros’ Instagram shows he posted 14 different pictures with Schumer since 2016. Schumer met Alex for drinks and discussed student debt with him. Canceling student debt has been a major agenda item for the Biden administration and Hill Democrats.

The Soros family influence over the Democratic Party is such that Alex was able “to welcome President @barackobama back into my home this week and introduce him on behalf of the National Democratic Redistricting Committee @demredistrict #Gerrymandering has hijacked our democracy so the views of the majority Americans are not represented. The #NDRC is here to fight that and other tactics that undermine our democracy. I am honored to stand with #PresidentObama behind this effort.”

Obama is not the only former president Alex Soros spends time with, as Alex traveled the world alongside former President Bill Clinton and met global leaders.
How Alex Soros and Open Society Spread Influence Around the World

Alex Soros finds a myriad of ways to get the ear of prominent officials across the world, from working with world leaders in international organizations and conferences to spending lavishly in their countries.

For example, he moderated a panel on “US Foreign Policy Under the Next American President” at the annual meeting of the European Council on Foreign Relations (ECFR) in 2019.

OSF gave $12,024,160 to the ECFR from 2016-2021.

Two of these donations were labeled, “Unlocking Europe's Hidden Internationalist Majority” and intended to fight “isolationism and ultra-nationalism” in Europe. Other panel guests included three Biden appointees – Jake Sullivan, Amanda Sloat, and Sarah Margon. Biden ultimately withdrew his appointment of Margon after her anti-Israel bias went public. The panel also included radical leftist Ben Rhodes, who worked as a Deputy National Security Advisor for the Obama administration.

At the annual meeting in 2023, Alex reminisced on the 2019 conference and referred to the organization's work this way: “when we had informally created these networks, um, really helped, uh, restore the transatlantic relationship,” indicating that the organization was engaged in parallel diplomacy in 2019 behind Trump's back.

He made clear that he blames Trump for supposed problems in the transatlantic relationship, both in his writing and in his statements during the 2019 panel where he claimed that the former president was “more interested in civil war in the U.S., than anything, and you know, will call Putin, you know, and sell Ukraine the first thing he does when he gets elected.”

Alex has also gotten involved with the United Nations. He appeared with the current UN Secretary General Antonio Guterres on December 7, 2017. He and his father also met with then-UN Secretary General Ban Ki-Moon in 2016. It was at the UN in 2019 that Alex discussed environmental and economic issues with Prime Minister of Spain Pedro Sánchez Pérez-Castejón. In a 2023 post, Alex mentioned the meeting, crediting the prime minister for “his ambitious initiatives around renewables and making his country greener.”

Alex accompanied Bill Clinton to meet Pope Francis on July 5, 2023. This meeting was particularly outrageous, as Alex, his father and Clinton have all promoted abortion, which the Catholic Church strongly opposes.

In September 2021, Alex tweeted out an article from OSF executive director Tom Perriello, saying that “The Catholic Church should be applauding President Biden’s pro-family agenda.” That's despite “Catholic” Biden's radical support for abortion and “transgenderism.”

The Catholic Church should be applauding President Biden’s pro-family agenda, says @OpenSociety-U.S.’s @TomPerriello.

While OSF has spent at least $21 million since 2016 to promote abortion, the group overseen by both George and Alex attacked the Catholic Church by giving $450,000 to the radical pro-abortion group “Catholics for Choice” between 2018 and 2021 alone.

Nevertheless, Alex tweeted, “What an honor to meet @Pontifex!” on July 8th, 2023.

Other world leaders have worked with Alex and the Open Society Foundations or serve on the boards with him and his father.
ALEX SOROS AND OPEN SOCIETY SPREAD INFLUENCE AROUND THE WORLD

Alex met with the former president of Chile in 2018 who had become the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Michelle Bachelet, before strongly endorsing her for that global role.

Bachelet has drawn favorable coverage from Soros' Open Society Foundations at least four times, while speaking at least two of Open Society Foundations' events, including an OSF event encouraging “good trouble” during the destructive and violent Black Lives Matter riots of 2020.

Alex also praised then-President of Colombia Juan Manuel Santos for bringing peace to Colombia after a 2017 meeting. Santos sits on the board of the International Crisis Group (ICG) with Alex and George Soros. OSF spent millions in the country and gave over $2 million to the ICG in 2016.

Alex's participation in international conferences provided the opportunity for a meeting with world leaders such as Macron at the 2019 Paris Peace Forum, Dutch Prime Minister Mark Rutte at the 2020 Munich Security Conference, King Abdullah II of Jordan at the globalist World Economic Forum (WEF) where the king was a speaker and Justin Trudeau in New York at a “Global Citizen” conference in 2023.

The Soros family has been active in promoting abortion in Africa. From 2019-2021, OSF gave $708,500 to the African Women's Development and Communications Network or FEMNET, which claims to work with partners to ensure “equal access to safe and legal abortion.”

Alex Soros met with the President of South Africa Cyril Ramaphosa in 2018. That was the same year that OSF funded a pro-abortion conference called “Abortion & Reproductive Justice: The Unfinished Revolution” to promote abortion in the country and throughout the continent. Soros complimented the president as a “beacon for democratic reform and good governance, felt not just in South Africa, but throughout the African continent and the world!”

Alex Soros has spoken with at least nine government leaders in Africa. Alex Soros met with the then-President of Liberia, Ellen Johnson Sirleaf, in New York in 2017. The former president sits on the board of the International Crisis Group with Alex and George Soros. Sirleaf would later praise George Soros on social media in 2020, for his support for so-called “freedom of choice.” Alex returned the favor, referring to her as “a symbol for democracy worldwide.”

Another area of interest for the Soros family is Eastern Europe. George Soros' massive spending and string-pulling in Eastern Europe, from the days of the Warsaw Pact to the present, have been well documented by sources like Rachel Ehrenfeld’s The Soros Agenda (2023). Alex Soros made clear in a September 2023 op-ed that he intends to shift the focus of the OSF’s work in Europe to Eastern Europe. In his op-ed, he bragged about his family spending $250 million on Ukraine, while professing his love — not for America — for the European Union, which he called “one of modern history's great triumphs” and a “global beacon of the values that shape our work.”

Like his father, Alex has met with presidents and prime ministers and other important dignitaries from Kiev to Vienna and from the Baltic Sea to the Adriatic. These meetings included 19 former or sitting presidents and prime ministers of Eastern European governments, including from the nation states of Austria, North Macedonia, Serbia, Albania, Kosovo, Croatia, Moldova, Montenegro and Latvia.

In July 2021, Alex Soros and then-North Macedonian Prime Minister Zoran Zaev gave a joint statement to the media about the situation of the Roma in the country. Soros had previously met with Zaev in 2018, after the Open Society Foundations drew fire for using federal tax dollars for political organizing in North Macedonia, including for “civic activism,” “mobilization” and “civic engagement.” Here is how Judicial Watch characterized George Soros’ use of taxpayer money to put his thumb on the scale of Macedonian elections:

has worked behind the scenes with Soros’ Open Society Foundation to funnel large sums of American dollars for the cause, constituting an interference of the U.S. Ambassador in domestic political affairs in violation of the Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations.”

Public discussion of Soros’ election interference did not deter Alex Soros from meeting with Prime Minister Dimitar Kovačevski of North Macedonia in 2023. Alex saluted Albanian Prime Minister Edi Rama as a “renaissance man” and a “visionary,” following a 2018 meeting. Alex Soros has also spent time with Rama more recently, while traveling with former U.S. president Clinton. While Alex Soros did not specify what policies made Rama stand out so much, Judicial Watch reports that the Soros family has heavily intervened in Albania since Rama’s election:

“The Obama administration sent U.S. taxpayers’ funds to a Soros-backed group that used the money to fund left-wing political activities in Albania. That included working with the country’s socialist government to push for highly controversial judicial ‘reform.’ The records also detail how the Soros operation helped the State Department review grant applications from other groups for taxpayer funding. USAID funds were funneled to Soros’ left-wing Open Society Foundations in Albania, particularly the Soros operation efforts to give the socialist government greater control of the judiciary. USAID reportedly gave $9 million in 2016 to the ‘Justice for All’ campaign, which is overseen by Soros’ ‘East West Management Institute.’”
The conservative movement spent more than a decade actively fighting George Soros and the billions he gave to radical, far-left groups, politicians and causes. Now, instead of his leftism, the right has to contend with his openly “more political” son who is 56 years younger.

George Soros used to say he would end his foundation empire instead of passing it along. Instead, he changed that plan and named his son Alex to head the Open Society Foundations. George ensured the conservative movement could well be fighting that $25-billion war chest for decades more. Alex has already gotten heavily involved by spending tens of millions of his father’s fortune to bolster the left’s electoral chances as head of Democracy PAC.

Alex’s unhinged hatred for the right, his financing of far-left causes and his enormous international political network should alarm every American, especially in light of his involvement in his father’s $2.3 billion extreme initiative to reshape global education into a toxic instrument of the Soros empire. We have witnessed the damage that the elder Soros’ massive fortune has already inflicted on American society. Alex is already signaling to the world that he’s going to be worse than his father, which is a staggering thought.

George Soros admitted in his magnum opus, The Alchemy of Finance, that he “always harbored” an “exaggerated view” of his “self-importance.” He continued: “[T]o put it bluntly, I fancied myself as some kind of god or economic reformer like [John Maynard] Keynes (each with his General Theory) or, even better, a scientist like Einstein.” It’s clear the apple doesn’t fall far from the tree with his son Alex.

Former Morgan Stanley Dean Witter Chief Strategist Byron Wien claimed that the elder Soros wielded “more influence in the world than anyone who has ever held high elective or appointive office.” Now his son will be carrying that mantle for the foreseeable future, guaranteeing that conservatives will be fighting the Soros empire’s agenda for decades to come.

Conservatives are under attack.
